

City Landfill Use Averts Garbage Crisis

KINGSTON — A garbage crisis in the City of Kingston was averted late Tuesday when officials gave private garbage haulers permission to truck their refuse to the city landfill at Kingston Point, but only on a temporary basis.

Garbage began piling up over the weekend outside county government buildings, city schools, Kingston Plaza and some individual stores. It was all precipitated by a temporary restraining order obtained by Town of Plattekill officials Friday banning the importation of refuse from out-of-town areas.

Private haulers — such as Hertel Enterprises and Spada Sanitation — were left with no place to truck the refuse, so they simply didn't collect it. City officials said the situation could have reached the "critical stage" Thursday or Friday had the garbage been allowed to accumulate.

An agreement was hammered out Tuesday afternoon at a meeting between the private haulers, Mayor Francis R. Koenig and the Board of Public Works. As a result, collections were resumed today and several truckloads of garbage were dumped at Kingston Point.

Permission to use the city landfill was granted only to those haulers who service city residents. "It was agreed that anyone who was using the Plattekill dump, and who was servicing the residents of the city, would be allowed to use the Kingston Point landfill on a temporary basis," said Woodrow Diehl, administrative assistant of the BPW, "but it was emphasized that this was only a temporary arrangement."

Diehl said city officials checked with the Dutchess County Health Department before agreeing to open Kingston Point to the private haulers. "We were talking about the possibility of a public health emergency," he said, "we agreed that it would be to the best advantage of the city in the long run to allow the haulers to use Kingston Point."

One obvious concern of city officials was the availability of space at Kingston Point. The site's "life expectancy" is limited, and the area will have to accommodate city trash until Kingston's new garbage collection system is implemented later this year.

Both Hertel and Spada were expected to dump between three and four truckloads of garbage at the landfill today, and then each will probably average about one truckload per day for the duration of the agreement.

"We're not talking about a lot of garbage," said Diehl, "but we're talking about more than we had going down there before."

The BPW will meet tonight with the private haulers to further discuss the arrangement. There is a possibility that some time limit may be imposed on the arrangement and that a fee may be established for each truckload of garbage that is dumped at the landfill.

Joseph Fiorello, owner of both Dutchess

Sanitation (which was transporting garbage from Dutchess County to the Plattekill landfill until Friday's restraining order was imposed) and Hertel Enterprises, said today that the city really had "no choice" in the matter. "The garbage was piling up and we had no place to take it," he said, "we realize this is only a temporary situation, but I don't know what is going to happen in the future."

The prospect of uncollected garbage piling up outside the Ulster County Office Building, the Court House, the Infirmary and the Jail didn't sit well with Peter J. Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature. He ordered a letter sent to Fiorello Tuesday stating that failure to collect the garbage would be considered a breach of Fiorello's contract with the county.

Fiorello said that he received the letter today and has turned it over to his attorney. He also said he felt he is being "harassed" by certain individuals, including Ulster County District Attorney Francis J. Vogt. "Our company," he said,

"will have to sue the Town of Plattekill and each individual associated with this harassment for damages."

But First Assistant District Attorney Michael Kavanagh pointed out Tuesday that the DA's office "did nothing more than enforce a town ordinance, which was valid on its face, until such time as the town could obtain its own attorney, which it has done."

Fiorello must show cause on April 19 why a permanent restraining order barring dumping at the Plattekill landfill should not be issued. At least until then, the city landfill will have to suffice. If a permanent order is issued, a new crisis — affecting both the city and its overburdened landfill — could surface.

Emergency Lung Surgery for Patty

REDWOOD CITY, — Patty Hearst's right lung collapsed Tuesday night, and she had apparently successful surgery for the condition.

The prognosis for her recovery is listed as "good," but her hospitalization puts off a courtroom confrontation with the newspaper heiress and convicted bank robber's former captors and now critics, William and Emily Harris.

Deadly Fight With City Hall

BALTIMORE, Md. — Charles Hopkins had problems with the Baltimore city government, and police say he came to city hall to settle them with a gun.

When the gunfire was over Tuesday, a city councilman was dead with a bullet in his chest, three other civic workers were wounded and Hopkins had five police bullets in him.

'Dead' Gun Bill Revived

WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee has revived a gun control bill once thought dead for this session.

It voted 26 to 6 Tuesday to toughen federal gun control laws and ban both manufacture and importation of cheap, easily concealed handguns.

But when the measure reaches the House, opponents expect to offer amendments which would weaken its provisions substantially.

The bill approved by the panel was a substitute offered by Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., knocking out a ban on the sale of cheap handguns which was contained in the measure originally adopted by the subcommittee on crime.

Hostages Released

BENGAZI—Three Filipino Moslem rebels released their 12 hostages in Libya today and were granted asylum in that country, Philippine Air Lines announced in Manila.

The rebels had threatened to blow up a commandeered jetliner in a their record-setting eight-day hijacking drama if their demands were not met.

The announcement by the PAL spokesman followed two days of negotiations between the gunmen and Libyan authorities during which Libya had turned down their pleas for asylum.

Domino Theory Seen

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger anticipates the so-called "domino theory" of Asia could apply to Western Europe if communists are voted into power in European elections.

"There could be a multiplier effect, yes," he told reporters when asked at the State Department Tuesday if, in a speech earlier in the day, he had intended to warn of a domino theory in Europe.

Kissinger testifies on foreign aid today in a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

Board of Elections 'Relieved'

NEW YORK — Federal court action has at least temporarily relieved the State Board of Elections of the responsibility of deciding whether to remove State Democratic Chairman Patrick J. Cunningham from his party posts.

Until it became clear Tuesday that a court order had been signed temporarily blocking the removal, lawyers for the board were of the opinion that Cunningham had forfeited his positions as Bronx County and state party chairman by refusing to sign a waiver of immunity Monday before a grand jury empaneled by special state prosecutor Maurice Nadjari.

Senate Passes Jobs Bill

WASHINGTON — The Senate has voted to pick a new veto fight with President Ford over jobs.

By 54 to 28 Tuesday it passed and sent to the House a bill to provide about $4 billion under expected rates of unemployment to create or preserve several hundred thousand jobs.

This would include:

— $1.1 billion to state and local governments for public works construction projects that could be started in 90 days. The exact amount would depend on the unemployment rate.

— $1.4 billion to help state and local governments balance their budgets without having to lay off employees.

— $1.4 billion for water pollution control construction projects.

Legal Roadblock for Out-of-Town Refuse

KINGSTON—Ulster County Legislators Tuesday night set up a legal barricade against out-of-county refuse by a 26-1 margin.

When there were no speakers at the 7:30 p.m. public hearing on the county's local law number two of 1976, Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago quipped, "There was plenty to say on this last week."

The only negative vote cast on the garbage ban was by Eugene Perry (D-Kingston), who offered a cluster of reporters "no comment" several minutes later when the results had been completed.

Pressed, he responded, "I practice home rule. We've got zoning laws. Why should we tell people what to do? ... I was a member of a planning board for five years. ... And then he added, "No comment."

Enforcement of the county trash ban has been questioned, as it contains a clause stating, "This local law shall not prohibit the continued operation of any refuse disposal areas within the County of Ulster which are being lawfully used in whole or in part on the effective date of this local law ..." as long as less than 60 tons of trash per week are dumped.

The "crisis" in Plattekill at the town landfill site has been temporarily eased with Dutchess County once again opening up a spot near its airport for Poughkeepsie garbage contractor Joseph Fiorello's firm (Dutchess Sanitation) to bury its trash in bales.

According to a recent statement from Assistant County Attorney Francis Murray, this exception clause in the law would make it difficult to enforce the law on a daily basis, noting there is no precedent for counties taking such action, although there is for towns.

The state purpose of the law passed Tuesday is "to regulate the use of refuse disposal sites in Ulster County by eliminating disposal ... of refuse originating without the county, and thereby promote the longevity of existing disposal sites as well as any which might hereafter be developed within the county."

Violations are punishable by a fine of up to $300 per offense or six months in jail, or both, classified as a misdemeanor.

Since the exception clause states that the law "shall not prohibit" present lawful dumpers "on the effective date of this local law," and since the effective date of the law is stated as taking effect immediately, it would appear that with Fiorello's Dutchess Sanitation not presently dumping in Ulster it is effectively precluded from starting.

IT'S BEEN A DECADE... since the deuce was loose in the land. But back in circulation Tuesday went the new $2 bill as banks all over the country began filling requests for what looks like funny money. These "better's bucks" were among the first dispensed to eager customers by request at Kingston's Bankers Trust on Wall Street.

Three More Toss Hats in School Board Ring

KINGSTON — Three more candidates for two seats on Kingston Schools Consolidated Board of Education have announced their candidacy for five-year terms. Former Board President Joseph F. Feraca, present board member, Ronald J. Meyer and Harold Van Allen made their bids known today. Earlier, Len Cane of Kingston threw his hat in the ring for the Tuesday, May 4 election which will be held from noon to 9 p.m.

Feraca said he is relying on his past record of achievement as chairman of the personnel committee and president of the board. He is seeking unity among board members, saying he is "concerned and upset at the present bickering" since he feels the board member's interests should be solely in the education of the children, and maintaining or improving the quality of it.

Recognizing the problems at the high school and the immediate need to come to a final solution, Feraca doesn't feel that staggered sessions are the answer. Citing the fact that school population census figures in 1972 were inaccurate and that in 1979-80 the student enrollment will be only 2,700 instead of 3,100, he suggests that the board use the library property adjacent to the high school instead of building a new school. Feraca explained that by moving the school library to the present public library, eight classes would be freed. He would also utilize the ninth period, he said.

He said he would not support a new high school because the people have rejected it and because of the economic climate of the area and the high rate of unemployment. "I support the neighborhood school concept and will actively fight any attempts to move children from the schools they now attend," he said.

Meyer, an employee of American Telephone and Telegraph Company is a communications craftsman who "believes that quality education can be maintained by keeping neighborhood schools."

Meyer said he is seeking another term on the board because quality education, maintaining the neighborhood school concept, and providing equal programs for all our students are the main issues we must face up to in the months ahead."

Meyer claimed that as chairman of the communications committee of the board, he has held public information meetings, set up a telephone information line, and provided residents with direct access to district records.

"Because certain members of the board of education are unable or refuse to decide on a long range plan to solve the problems of overcrowding at Kingston High School, I presented a resolution calling for a referendum on the building of a new high school or some other option. It was defeated twice because certain irresponsible board members have clearly denied the public its democratic right in a free society," he said.

Meyer resides with his wife and three sons at 186 Downs Street.

Van Allen, of Hurley Heights, has submitted his petition for election because "of my life long interest in education."

Retired after 30 years with IBM as an engineer, he was elected to the Hurley School Board in the year the Kingston City Schools Consolidated.

He states that he has been asking questions of district residents as he gathers names for his petition, and has included questions on whether voters are in favor of a new high school; should the high school and MJM Junior High be combined; and whether parents are satisfied with the education their children are receiving.

Van Allen has also compiled a list of what he considers to be "information that is needed before intelligent decisions can be made" on school property, population and taxes since 1960.

"My limited recent observations of the problems facing the Kingston area schools indicate a challenging assignment if the taxpayer is to be recognized as an important factor in the ultimate solution to our children's education."

Four of Van Allen's children have graduated from the school system during his 20 years as a Hurley resident.

Defensive Driving For Seniors

KINGSTON—Chapter 2039, American Association of Retired Persons, will offer a four-day defensive driving course in May.

The course will be conducted from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on May 5-6-12-13 at the Holiday Inn in Kingston, sponsored by AARP and the National Retired Teachers Association. John J. McCordle, Emma Aprea, Irene Tracy and Margaret McCordle will serve as instructors.

Nearly seven million persons have taken the course, also offered by governmental agencies business firms and schools to their driving personnel.

Board Sets Hearing

RED HOOK—The board of education and the administrative staff of Red Hook Central School district will hold a public hearing to discuss the proposed 1976-77 school budget at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, May 5.

Declining enrollments, declining equalization rates, reductions in state aid and ever-increasing operational costs were all considered in an effort to draft a proposal that would not be overwhelming in cost to local property taxpayers, officials said, noting that expenditures have been held to a minimum.

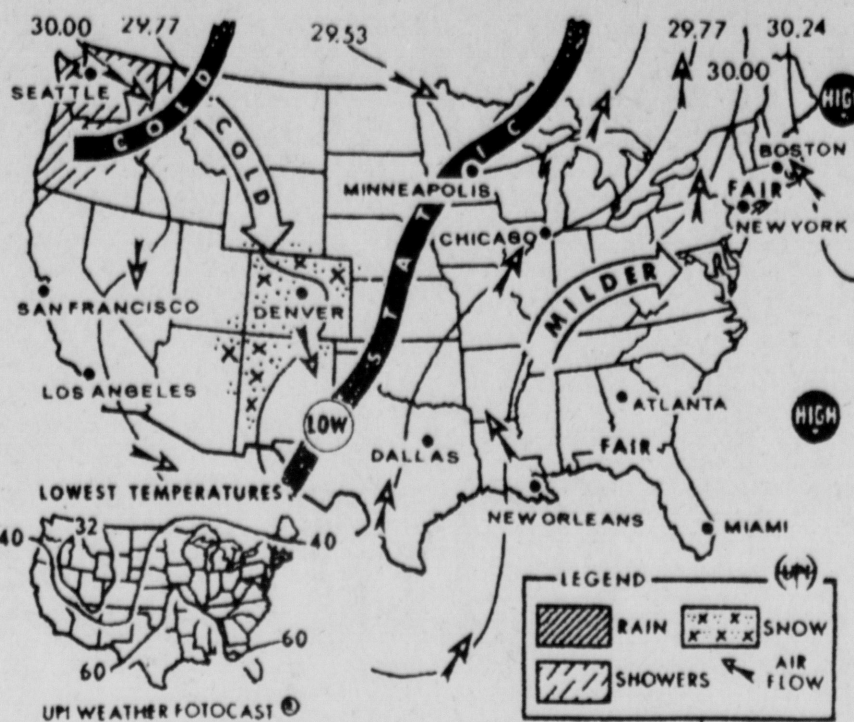

Staff reductions have been approved in administration, classroom teachers, school nurse teacher, music, guidance, secretarial, teacher aides, speech therapy and custodial areas.

Interscholastic sports will be limited to league contests except in sports where no league exists. In this case the number of contests will be limited.

Workshop Is Planned

KINGSTON—A weaving workshop has been scheduled for April 28 at George Washington School for anyone interested, with members of the Kingston City Schools Art Department cooperating with Phyllis Cohen of the Weaver's Store in Newton, Mass.

The workshop will initially deal with on-and-off the loom weaving techniques, but will be broadened to include other facets of fiber crafts. All materials will be provided. To register for the 7-10 p.m. class those interested may contact Ms. Bendazzi, director of art, Kingston High School.

For Period Ending 7 a.m., EST Thursday

During Wednesday night, showers and rain will be indicated in the Pacific Northwest, while snow is expected in the mid and lower Rockies. Clear to partly cloudy elsewhere. Silver Oxide Stolen

BENNINGTON, Vt. (UPI)—The apparent theft of more than $5,000 worth of silver oxide from the Union Carbide plant is under investigation by the FBI.

Robert Kent, chief FBI agent in Albany, N.Y., said Tuesday the company, located near the Massachusetts and New York borders, had reported some of the valuable chemical was missing from its manufacturing plant.

Under federal law, Kent said, if more than $5,000 is believed stolen the FBI can presume it may have been transported across state lines.

Meanwhile, plant manager Conrad Hoffman said an undetermined amount of silver oxide is missing and presumed stolen.

Hoffman said the chemical is used by the company to make alkaline batteries. Bennington Police Chief William Fox said his office was notified of the missing substance March 30, but since then has not been asked by the company to investigate the case.

Hoffman said the chemical

John Neely Bryan came to Texas from Van Buren, Ark., in 1840 and built a hut on the east bank of the Trinity River, becoming the first white settler of present-day Dallas.

The Blockage Being Looped

City officials inspect a portion of the Washington Avenue "loop" water main that was removed this week as part of the first stages of a major reconstruction and rehabilitation project conducted with Community Development funds. The repair project is intended to increase the flow capacity of the 16-inch water mains, in order to provide a more adequate water supply for domestic and commercial users

Public Works Complex to Swell

KINGSTON—The Kingston Common Council approved Tuesday night a $31,500 purchase of land to expand its Department of Public Works complex on Hasbrouck Avenue.

The vote was 11-2, with Donald Quick, D-Sixth Ward, and Philip DeCicco, D-Ninth Ward, opposed. Quick said: "Nobody knows how much this building will cost, when it will be built or where the money is coming from. We are buying a pig in a poke."

DeCicco said: "We passed a resolution against the Ulster County Legislature buying the Buick garage—now we are doing the same thing we told them not to do. We have property in urban renewal that we could get for almost nothing."

Majority Leader Peter Mancuso, D-12th Ward, noted that the city is now renting property to store equipment and that the two properties are adjacent to the department's present garage.

"It's better to buy there than to rent two or three other places," he said.

Minority Leader Titus Sims, R-13th Ward, said the department had outgrown the present buildings and that the city's new buses must be maintained. He said the decision to buy would save money in the long run.

Aldermen heard Clifford Sinsabaugh, D-10th Ward, criticize contractor James Berardi's work on two projects, one uptown on the Clinton Avenue extension, the other downtown in the Delaware-Murray-Hanratty area. Sinsabaugh said that Berardi had been negligent, that the city was being "ripped off," that storm drains installed by Berardi were only 50 per cent usable, and that engineers Brinnier and Larios were "amazed" when they inspected them.

Sinsabaugh said the engineers were readying a report for him and for James Connors, the urban renewal executive director.

Sinsabaugh also criticized conditions at the city landfill, saying: "The city now is doing nothing but polluting the Hudson River."

The Council heard the first reading of a resolution that would require all city employees to reside within the city limits. The measure would make exceptions for persons with "special skills" and would not apply to those now employed by the city. People leaving the city to live would forfeit their right to their jobs under the measure.

The council voted to buy three voting machines at $2,150 each from Automatic

Voting Machine Corp. without competitive bidding to standardize its equipment. Sinsabaugh noted that most polling places had trouble in the last election and called for company representatives to investigate and correct the conditions.

The Kingston City Laboratory had a so-so night before the Council. Its agreement to furnish lab services for Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals was extended through the remainder of 1976 but the Council turned down two requests for reimbursement for lab personnel to attend out-of-state conferences, both by 6-7 votes.

Clarence Raichle, D-First Ward, said it was a poor move. "If you don't want a city lab, just keep turning down these requests," he told fellow alderman. John Finch, D-Fifth Ward, said money for conference trips was in the budget and had been approved.

"It is inconsistent to vote 'yes' here and 'no' there," he said.

In other action, the Council: • Referred to committee a proposal that would provide for a meeting of applicants with the zoning board in executive session before public hearings are held on zoning change requests.

• Referred to committee a proposal by Joseph Markle, R-Third Ward, that would establish a block watchers crime prevention program. Markle said the idea had provided dramatic decreases in crime in nearby Newburgh at a time when national crime rates were going up.

• Heard Raichle call for a three-strand barbed wire fence on top of the animal enclosure at Forsyth Park to protect animals from vandals.

• Voted to hire two parking meter attendants at not more than $6,000 annually and give them peace officer powers.

New Signs of Welcome

KINGSTON—The City of Kingston has unveiled two new "welcome" signs that will be displayed at the major entrances to the city.

The signs were designed by John Geary of the Department of Public Works. George Carlson, a DPW carpenter and cabinet maker, handled the carpentry and joinery.

The materials necessary to construct the two signs were donated by the Civic Improvement Committee of the Kingston Lions Club. City officials are hoping that other service clubs will follow the lead of the Lions Club and donate materials for the construction of additional signs.

One sign will be erected at the city entrance on Washington Avenue at Taylor Street, near the Route 28 traffic circle. The other sign will be located at the Chandler Drive entrance to the Albany Avenue interchange. The DPW's goal is to construct and erect five additional signs that will be displayed at all prime entrances to the city.

Each sign measures 9½ feet tall and seven feet wide, with the display area five feet above ground level. The sign offers a "welcome" to city visitors and notes that Kingston was the first capital of New York State.

One sign was put up when the New York State Senate returned to Kingston recently for a session.

MATTHEW F. McHUGH
McHugh Here

Congressman Matthew F. McHugh (D-27) will speak to the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County members on the state of the economy at an April 23 breakfast meeting in the Colonade Restaurant. Reservations can be made by the general public by contacting the chamber office by April 21, according to executive vice president Len Cane. The breakfast will begin at 7:45 a.m. and conclude at 9 a.m., with a question and answer session with Congressman McHugh scheduled.

O'Dwyer to Saugerties

KINGSTON—Paul O'Dwyer, Council President, City of New York the man who in 1972 won acquittal for peace activists Father Philip Berrigan and Sister Elizabeth McAlister at a spectacular trial in Harrisburg, Pa., has accepted an invitation to speak at the annual Spring dinner-dance sponsored by the Saugerties Democratic Club.

The May 1st event will take place in the Flamingo Restaurant and Bill Marchetti, club president, predicts a memorable evening. Members of his committee urge early reservations be made.

Paul O'Dwyer, born in County Mayo, Ireland, is the 11th child of rural schoolteachers. At the age of 18 he came to New York, attended Fordham University and St. John's Law School at night while working as a packer, elevator operator and cargo checker on the Brooklyn waterfront.

O'Dwyer's public life encompasses many dedicated years in service to the Democratic Party. In 1958 he joined with Eleanor Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman in forming the Committee for Democratic Voters. He worked closely with Mayor Wagner, President Kennedy, Arthur Goldberg and in 1968 emerged from the Democratic primary as candidate for United States Senate. He led the McCarthy contingent at the Chicago convention.

Through the years, O'Dwyer has represented a variety of trade unions and actively aided them in the troublesome 30's. A man of deep compassion and incredible drive, he has been a participant in the fight for Civil Rights, often volunteering his services as counsel.

Married to Kathleen Rohan, whom he describes as a charming and extremely patient wife, three of their four children, William Eileen and Brian are graduates of the High School of Music and Art. Rory is a graduate of Black-rock College in Dublin and is now a businessman on Long Island. Eileen has her masters in Business Administration from Columbia, William is an Albany pediatrician and Brian is a lawyer.

Duane Withdraws

KINGSTON—Allan Duane announced his withdrawal as a candidate for the School Board of the Kingston Consolidated School District today.

A faculty member at Ulster County Community College, Duane said, "My concern was quality education in our primary and secondary school system. My fear was that not enough responsible persons were going to become candidates."

Duane pointed out, however, that "when Len Cane announced his candidacy for the School Board, I decided not to file my petitions and to give my entire support to his election."

"Mr. Cane's commitment to the well-being of our community has been proven on many fronts over the years. I am therefore urging all those who worked with me and shared my concern for the education of our children to give their full support to Len Cane in the upcoming May election," Duane concluded.

Patty's Lung Collapse Delays Facing Harrises

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Patricia Hearst underwent surgery for a collapsed lung, forcing her to miss today's scheduled courtroom confrontation in Los Angeles with her former Symbionese Liberation Army captors.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress, convicted of bank robbery in San Francisco and given a temporary federal sentence of 35 years, was hospitalized Tuesday night with a collapsed right lung.

She was reported in stable condition at nearby Sequoia Hospital where she was under heavy security.

"She was moved comfortably and the prognosis is good," a spokesman at San Mateo County Jail said.

The spokesman said a doctor diagnosed her ailment as "tension pneumothorax" — a collapsed lung.

Her hospitalization canceled for the time being a meeting between Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris, her former captors and revolutionary comrades, now legal opponents and bitter critics.

Miss Hearst was to face the Harrises today in a Los Angeles courtroom, a day after it was reported she had "turned state's evidence," and disclosed details of SLA crimes to the FBI — implicating the Harrises.

Miss Hearst was to appear as a codefendant with the Harrises to enter a plea to 11 state charges of kidnaping, robbery and assault. They have not seen each other since they were arrested seven months ago.

After her appearance in Los Angeles, Miss Hearst was to have been taken to San Diego for 90 days of psychiatric examination before final sentence was imposed in San Francisco.

CBS news reported Tuesday, quoting "sources close to the case," that Miss Hearst, in an interview with FBI agents Monday, had given them her "own description of the SLA bank robbery near Sacramento last year in which a pregnant woman bystander was killed."

The report said Miss Hearst "named a half-dozen members of the robbery team, including, sources say, her old SLA companions William and Emily Harris."

Steven Soliah, with whom Miss Hearst was living when she was arrested, is on trial in Sacramento for the robbery.

Miss Hearst reportedly told the FBI who fired the fatal shot during the robbery, but said it was an accident.

One Man's Day of Rage At Baltimore City Hall

(UPI)

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Charles Hopkins had had his problems with local government. Neighbors said he was evicted from his apartment and denied an application for a restaurant lease.

His rage apparently built. He was convicted earlier this month of ripping up a flag and setting it afire. City officials also said he disrupted a Board of Estimates budget meeting Monday.

Tuesday, police said, he went on a rampage and shot his way through two City Hall floors.

When it was over, authorities said, a city councilman lay dead, three other civic workers had been wounded and Hopkins himself had been felled by five police bullets.

A fourth official suffered an apparent heart attack several hours later.

Police said Hopkins, 35, of Baltimore, was hospitalized in critical condition under police guard.

Councilman Dominic Leone, a portly 50-year-old Baltimore tavern owner died of a bullet wound in the chest.

Councilman Carroll Fitzgerald, 41, and Kathleen Nolan, 39, Mayor William

Schaefer's secretary, both were reported in serious condition. Policeman Tom Gaither was listed in fair condition with a leg wound.

Council Vice President J. Joseph Curran, who apparently was shot at but not hit, complained of chest pains, several hours later and was hospitalized in serious condition.

Schaefer said he was eating lunch in his office when the gunman told his secretary he wanted to see the mayor, then shot her.

Police said he then raced down a flight of stairs to Fitzgerald's office, held a gun to his head and demanded to be taken to see the mayor.

The gunman turned into Leone's office and shot him on the way back to the seventh floor, where they were met by police at the office of Council President Walter Orlinsky.

"He's got a gun to my head," shouted Fitzgerald.

Police drew back. Then they heard a shot and rushed into Orlinsky's office to find Fitzgerald slumped over, bleeding.

Schaefer, after talking with police and visiting the hospitalized city officials, said it appeared the gunman had intended to kill him.

"That's what they told me," said Schaefer, tears in his eyes.

"Apparently, though, he was going to shoot everyone who was in his way."

Candidates Wooing Editors

By UPI

Jimmy Carter, Henry Jackson and Morris Udall converged on Washington today for a morning meeting with delegates to the American Society of Newspaper Editors. And guess who was speaking at lunch? Noncandidate Hubert Humphrey, that's who.

The Minnesota senator is never far from the political action these days. His role in the campaign was the subject of some of the political oratory Tuesday.

Carter, at a news conference in Atlanta where he was endorsed by a group of black leaders including Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., called Jackson a "stalking horse" for Humphrey in Pennsylvania.

"If I should win in Pennsylvania, which is certainly not a certainty, then I think that would eliminate a substantial part of the emphasis on Mr. Humphrey's noncandidacy," he said.

Both Carter and Udall attended a dinner Tuesday in Philadelphia sponsored by the Americans for Democratic Action and had a love feast with nothing but compliments for each other.

They agreed any Democrat could do a better job of running the country than the Ford administration.

Udall said the country owed Carter "a debt of gratitude" for showing a candidate from the South could garner such national popularity. Carter said he had "respect and admiration" for the Arizona congressman.

President Ford held his own meeting with the visiting editors in the White House's Rose Garden and told them he still thinks Humphrey and not Carter will be the Democratic candidate.

He had these other observations:

— He saw John Connally in his office earlier Tuesday, at his invitation, but had not offered him the vice presidency or any other federal job, and had not sought his endorsement for the Texas primary.

— He would not himself have used the words "ethnic purity," which have haunted Carter, but he agreed the government should not encroach on the "ethnic heritage" of established neighborhoods.

Asked why he thought challenger Ronald Reagan has drawn "almost half the vote" in primaries against him, Ford said, "I have a formidable opponent," but added: "We're doing very well in the delegates and that's where the ball game is won or lost."

Reagan once again was in Texas, for his second campaign trip in a little more than a week. He planned at least one more swing before the May 1 primary.

Soon after arriving in the state Tuesday, Reagan acknowledged the importance of the Texas primary but said that even if he loses it he will pursue the GOP nomination at the Kansas City convention.

"Texas is a very important state, of course, but it's not a stay-in, stay-out primary," he said. "I plan to remain in the race right to the convention in Kansas City."

George Wallace also was in Texas and said in Fort Worth all his Democratic opponents were "fine men" who have largely adopted the policies he has enunciated for years.

Our American Family:

Dear Editor:

Our American Family :
Some years ago the U.N. initiated the IDEA of a Universal Language - Esperanto. American English is the reality of that IDEA. Former President Nixon helped seed the IDEA of a One World Gov't. in his State of the World (instead of Union) Message. The World Bank seeds the IDEA of a World Standardized money system. America is NOT COLLAPSING!!!

The supra American conglomerates in compliance with the conglomerate industrialists of other nations have formulated a global national alliance where graft, gratis, offs is an ancient characteristic of bartering. Let's face it, until recently we were probably the most naive nation of people in the world. Remember the lull in America when Eisenhower admitted publicly that Gary Powers and the U-2 plane was a spy mission. Up until that point with our naiveness WE TOILED side by side and nurtured the most productive assembly lines which have made LUXURIES available within the price range of the American Working Family.

Technology came upon us so fast and sudden that these GOD given abilities have been programmed by systematized problematic minds lost in the recordings of victimized history books. This technology is being abused ONLY for the lack of a better way that MUST have commercial value. Is there a way? Of course there is, and all of us know it, but we choose to say that it is too naive.

Being above board and straight forward in all dealings might cause U.S. firms some foreign business sales at first (the start is gradual), but it WILL build a reputation for square shooting that will inspire RESPECT AND TRUST. The word throughout the world, in the long run, will be that for a SQUARE DEAL, buy American.

The decay of morals in America is contrived and has set the stage for anarchy in government. "Grab what you can, and let the next elected official clean up the mess", is the sign of the times. What is evolving is a cause reason to initiate stringent law enforcement to the point of a non-aware growing police state.

Right now, America is in need of a face lifting by artician instead of would-be craftsmen abusing our American Trust. The intricate details that create the overall family image have been cast aside. Modern defense - to protect us from the enemy is predominately within the realm of the transistor. The monies once necessary for mammoth defense machineries is no longer required. A close scrutiny of the Pentagon's budget and accounting records would reveal that by tightening their budget, their efficiency would actually increase as more and more projects are verified first, in the lab. The excess billions of dollars that are saved by not starting so many of the projects that are constantly junked - would be re-routed from the defense budget to a WPA endeavor. Money is not what we need!!!

I still have my trust in the reality of the AMERICAN HERITAGE PARTY - that has a solid realistic platform in '76.

It is about time that we stopped voting against candidates and accepting the lesser of the two evils.

Respectfully American,
PHILIP GURRIERI
Kingston

A Bicentennial Slate

Dear Editor:

I propose a Bicentennial slate for this presidential year. I dream of an election slate as follows:

Because President Ford is always awake and ready to use his Presidential Veto (36 times) on all the issues of concern to the U.S. citizens, I therefore nominate Rip Van Winkle for president: Mr. Winkle awakes sleeps and would do no damage to our economy or use his veto power.

For Vice President I propose Mr. Thieu, former dictator and savior of South Vietnam because of his able background and ability to accumulate 16 tons of gold, of course, taken from the American taxpayers.

For Cabinet members, I nominate all those war fighters and those active for world peace. For Director of the CIA, Alexander Solzhenitsyn of Russia, who was such an able man that he amassed and deposited $6 million in a Switzerland bank even before he was exiled from Russia by those red dictator communists.

For Director of the FBI I nominate Mickey Motse or Donald Duck. Now, with such a patriotic list of candidates, we can relax and forget about all our troubles because all these able politicians will stop inflation and unemployment, and bring back our prosperity. Do you remember those WIN buttons of President Ford's? He was wrong then and he is wrong now.

Sincerely,
ANGELO DELEWIS

Congrats on Cartoon

Dear Editor:

I wish to congratulate your cartoon artist Landi for the cartoon on the School Board in the April 7, 1976 issue of your paper.

The answer to the problem is on page one of the April 7 issue in the article entitled "Expert says new H.S. Best, Not Only Way. It reports that Mr. William Haessig, director of Facilities Planning of the State Education department, recommends one high school for our district. This should be 2200 to 2400 pupil in size and would meet our needs for the next 50 years.

We already have a high school which if combined with the MJM Junior High has a capacity of 2615 students. Since the High School and the junior high schools are each three (3) years in length, the same capacity is needed for junior high. The M. Miller Junior High and the J.W. Bailey have a combined capacity of 2217.

This means that we do not need to build to satisfy the needs of our district on a long term basis. Any inconvenience in our schools is only a temporary thing and temporary measures should be used. The money saved by not building new buildings could be used to update and provide better facilities in our existing buildings.

I believe that the average citizen in our district understands I also expect all voters in the district will vote May 4, 1976 in the election for school board members.

Thank you.
Sincerely,
Fred C. Hofbauer
Member of the School Board

Teachers Are Saddened

Dear Editor:

Letter sent to Ewald Nyquist, Commissioner of Education and Donald A. Lawson, president of Onetora Central School Board of Education:

As teachers at Onetora we are saddened by the existence of a situation that has forced the Board of Education to take action against the Superintendent of Schools. We have tried to honor Mr. Lawson's request not to keep the controversy alive with letters, but find that we can no longer keep our views to ourselves.

We want you to be aware of our support for the manner in which the hearings were conducted and for the restraint and good judgment displayed by each of you during that time. We appreciate the efforts made by the Board to correct what many of us believe to be an unhealthy atmosphere present in our district. We join with you in the hope that we will be able to unite once again in order to return to a positive course necessary for quality education.

Sincerely
Michael J. Boyle, Judith A. Hague, Diane Pettit, Wesley A. Kissel, Mimi McLaughlin, Lillian K. Gabriel, Kathleen Robinson, George A. DeFina, R. Rudolph Hellenschmidt, Susanne Cotter, Avis A. Gebert, Virginia A. Wright, Joyce A. Goodrich, JoAnn Traul, Helen L. Turck.

Open, Honest Dealing

Dear Editor:

Prejudice:— It has different categories - jealousy, bias, bigotry, gossip - it's a sign of human frailty. These traits of behavior are in most of us and should be dealt with open and honest in our feelings toward others, whether it's racial, religious, national, or any strata of society.

The antagonism survives even though we know the attitude is unreasonable because our institutions are meant to be bias free.

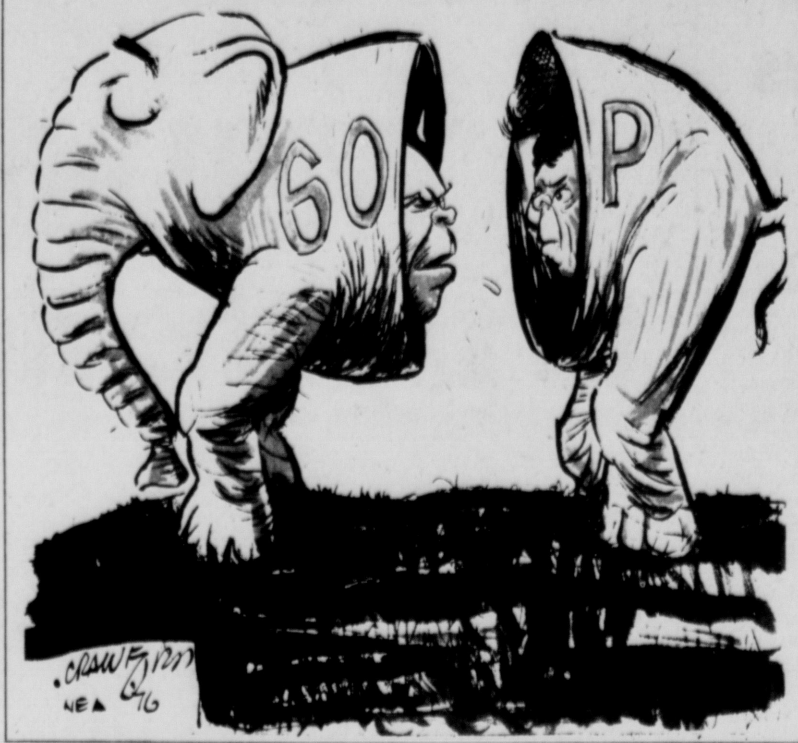

A child even knows that racism is unfair but when adults as well as children are injured psychologically, lose faith, disillusioned, when something goes wrong. This tendency builds up our pride and ego because we develop these prejudices as an outlet for our inner feelings. Therefore, we should reassess ourselves as we pick up attitudes from others in conversation based upon our experiences real or imagined.

Why build yourself up in opposing drives, desires, and taking our emotions out on others. There are all kinds of people in the world. We all can't be wealthy, or possess the charm of good luck it's a fact of life - so why the prejudices?

Sincerely yours,
EDWIN J. HIGBY

You Should Be Used to It

Nicholas Von Hoffman

As TV Sees the News

WASHINGTON — Television news is a succession of deus ex machina bolts from the blue, and no news is more so than foreign news. The Peron family has come and gone in Argentina, and those handsome, authoritative voices on the tube haven't yet suggested how, how come or why. Election returns from Bangkok and Cuban expeditionary forces in the dark heart of Africa are reported to us rather like comets or cancer cures, something to be apprehended for the moment and forgotten.

From time to time, though, television news attempts to throw itself onto a continuing news story about some situation in another land that may last for weeks and months. Into that category we could put the English pound sterling and the Portuguese revolution where, you may recall, the seldom-if-ever-interviewed Communists were threatening to effect a Russian-backed coup d'etat for months until one day they vanished from our TV sets as though they had been vaporized.

Currently the longest-running, most baffling foreign news story concerns Lebanon. Night after night we have been told that "right-wing Phalangists" and "left-wing Moslems" are fighting terrible pitched battles for the Holiday Inn, the Sheraton, the Quality Court and the Marriott. We are shown pictures of skirmishes at the Golden Arches and cafés at the Burger Chef's. To listen to it, there is no way to tell the difference between what's going on in Beirut and a 1960's-style race riot in Cleveland, Ohio.

Lately, however, the names of one or two individuals have been added to the story. References are made to an old geezer, Suleimen somebody or other, who apparently is or was the president of the country, but who is in flight or hiding or under siege because some of those armed men whose pictures we see don't like him. Why don't they like him? Who are those armed men? What the hell is going on over there?

The best story is China. Even what has come to be routine China coverage is hilariously mystifying, consisting as it usually does of pictures of touring American politicians sitting with Mao Tse-tung, who either doesn't have or won't wear his dentures. We are shown defrocked President Jones or Senator Bilge-daddy, chairman of the powerful joint congressional committee on poultry reform, shaking hands with the revered if palsied old chairman who is slobbering drool on the American politician's wide lapels. The voice-over of the confident American correspondent informs us that Bilge-daddy was awakened at 4:30 a.m. to go to this surprise meeting but that it is a high honor.

That's the routine news. Then there are the upheavals. Behind Chancellor or Cronkite they show a slide of the map of China - always in red but only sometimes with hammer and sickle - and announce that the prime minister, veteran supreme party committee member Egg Foo Young, has been replaced and the acting prime minister is now Moo Shi Pork... It is explained that Egg Foo Young's fall is a slap in the face of the faction led by former prime minister and friend of the West, Chou En-lai, who is dead. By way of background information we are told Chou rose to power when the late Marshal Won Ton's plane was shot down while he was returning from Russia with a suitcase-sized atom bomb which he planned to use to seize Hankow.

Then we cut to the network's State Department expert who gives us the news that U.S. government Sinologists don't believe that the continuing battle between the defunct Chinese general and the dead prime minister will have any serious effect on our relations with Peking. Stay tuned to this channel for developments.

In Like Flynt

WASHINGTON — The House Ethics Committee, which was created eight years ago to investigate unethical Congressmen, has been roused from its torpor to hound not a Congressman but a newsman.

As its first great investigation, the committee has hired a squad of ex-FBI agents to find out who leaked the House CIA report to newscaster Dan Schorr.

Now that the committee has been raised from the dead and has acquired the means to investigate somebody, we recently offered to provide the names of some bonafide Congressmen whose ethics need investigation.

If the committee is determined to investigate leaks, for example, we suggest it begin with House Ethics Chairman John Flynt, D-Ga., himself.

With his sleek, silver hair and stern, patrician face, he is the picture of a proper Congressman. But behind the imposing dignity, he is a sly, old veteran at leaking stories that will benefit himself.

We have established, for example, that he leaked confidential military information to reporters on June 10, 1973 to get publicity for himself and his views.

The Army provided Flynt, as a power on the military appropriations subcommittee, with a tightly-guarded reorganization plan 24 hours before it was supposed to be released. This contained news that a major headquarters would be located at Fort McPherson, Ga.

The Congressman was eager to be identified with the news. So he called two reporters into his inner office, closed the doors and passed out the confidential reorganization details. The subsequent story prominently featured Flynt's views.

An Army spokesman, without naming Flynt, told us the premature release was "improper."

On another occasion, the General Accounting Office conducted a confidential study of the Spewell Bluff dam for Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. He circulated the study, as a courtesy, to some of his colleagues. For them to release the information without his consent would be considered a serious ethical violation.

The governor of Georgia at the time, Jimmy Carter, discreetly cited some of the contents at a press conference. He was careful, however, not to release the text.

Reporters, catching the scent of a good story, sought the full text, but Talmadge would not release it. Yet Flynt, again in the secrecy of his office, handed over a Xeroxed copy of the confidential document to a reporter. The subsequent story, of course, featured Flynt's views.

This leak occurred, in case the committee is interested, on Oct. 2, 1973.

It might also be considered a violation of ethics for a Congressman to boost a company that is paying him a big rental fee. But in 1972, the Ford Motor Company paid him $12,500 to rent an empty field where they could store up to 30,000 new cars. The cars temporarily were barred from the market until they could be re-tested to determine whether they met antipollution standards.

Some months later, Flynt denounced the standards on the House floor, calling them "ridiculous in the extreme." He tried unsuccessfully to get Congress to relax the standards. When Flynt came up for reelection in 1974, company chairman Henry Ford II and his brother, Benson Ford, ponied up $200 apiece for the Congressman's campaign.

It is also considered an unethical practice for Congressmen to take free flights in corporate planes. We have learned that Flynt, nevertheless, calls upon Beech Aircraft and Atlanta Gas Light to provide him with air taxi service. Beech does millions in defense business, which is funded by Flynt's subcommittee. The company was happy, therefore, to fly him in a sleek Beechcraft turbojet to St. Simon's island off the coast of Georgia for golfing and to the fabled Masters course in Augusta, Ga.

Once Flynt needed to return to Washington to chair an Ethics Committee meeting. One of the subjects discussed was unethical corporate courting of Congressmen. Yet believe it or not, Flynt wangled a free ride to the meeting in a corporate plane belonging to Atlanta Gas Light.

His corporate friends don't have jets with enough range to fly to Africa, where his daughter and her husband are stationed. So Flynt billed the taxpayers instead for a junket to Africa. There are those who might say this, too, is unethical.

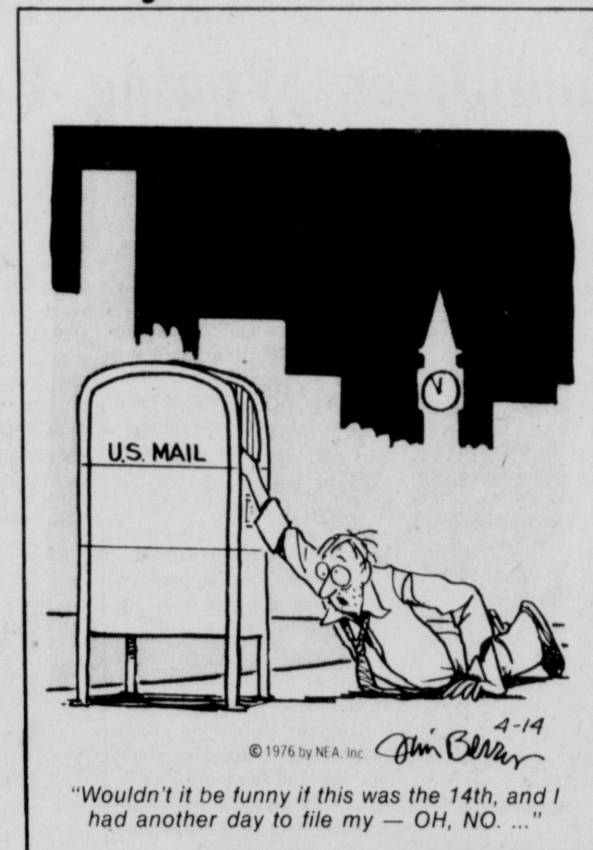

On other occasions, Flynt has turned up at the secluded Wye Island, Md., lodge of another defense contractor, Rockwell International, to shoot geese.

The members of the House Ethics Committee would do well to remember that an informed public can bring about a change in the ethical standards of Congress by mandating a change in its membership.

Footnote: Flynt talked to us fully about his activities. He did not "leak" the Army information, he said, but merely confirmed what the reporters had already learned. Our sources insist this is not true.

After Carter leaked information from the GAO report, Flynt told us: "I just thought I'd let it all hang out." He confirmed his rides on corporate aircraft but said he saw no conflict. Nor did he see anything wrong with his Ford Motor Company relationship. He got less rental, he said, than Ford had planned to pay for other land.

A Typical Welcome Back From Fun City

NEW YORK — Our plane lands at JFK International Airport. Vacation over, alas. Time is 4:52.

5:30 — Cleared by immigration and customs.

5:44 — Leave wife, three children, and mound of luggage in front of Arrivals Building. Go to bus stop for Long Term Parking Lot on outskirts of airport.

5:55 — Just as bus arrives I remember that car keys are in briefcase.

5:57 — Return to get keys. Suffer jeers of family, who beginning to shiver in thin vacation clothing.

6:05 — Take next bus to L.T.P. Lot.

6:25 — Car won't start. Open hood and discover that battery stolen. Feel deep depression.

6:32 — Report theft to policeman in patrol car. He says it happens all the time and could have been worse. Will write report later. Suggests I first get another battery.

6:37 — Call airport garage from parking lot toll booth. Lady at garage says car has to be towed. I protest that it would be easier and cheaper to take battery to car rather than vice-versa. Get permission to talk to higher authority.

6:39 — Higher authority agrees to bring battery to car if I (a) provide engine number, and (b) provide his employees with $57.50 for battery, service call, and labor. No choice so I say okay.

6:55 — Call garage with engine number after walking to car and back. Am told it will take half an hour to find, activate, and deliver battery. 7:05 — Try to figure out way to inform family that I have not flown coop with stewardess or been mugged. No way to communicate.

7:10 — Find policeman and suggest this good time to make out report. He would rather wait until replacement takes over at 7:30.

7:13 — Chat with man at toll booth whose phone I've been using. He says it happens all the time. It could have been worse.

7:32 — Two men show up in tow truck. Ride with them to stranded car. They say this kind of thing happens all the time and it could have been worse. Battery business booming.

7:36 — Men look under hood and say thieves didn't do much damage. Sometimes they rip out cables. Try to feel grateful.

7:56 — Battery installed. Car starts.

8:01 — Pay $26.00 to man at toll booth. Total cost of parking for 12 days, including battery, was $83.50. Could have parked in center of airport at $6.00 a day and had two steak dinners.

8:02 — New officer sitting in patrol car outside toll booth. Tell him about theft. He says it happens all the time and could have been worse.

I ask what does everyone mean, it could have been worse?

He says it's worse in farthest lot out. Kinney Parking, Inc., locks that one up at night and we can't patrol it. Out there thieves take tires, radios, tape decks, batteries, and would take engines if they weren't too heavy to get over fence.

Ask officer if he would mind making out report for insurance purposes. He says he has six hours ahead and nothing better to do.

8:23 — Report completed. Take off for Arrivals Building.

8:35 — Shoot past Arrivals Building on wrong road. Have to circle airport again.

8:40 — Pick up frigid family, which had been anxiously consulting with police, airline and airport officials.

Family asks what happened. I say battery was stolen. It happens all the time. It could have been worse.

Chrome Supply Is Limited and Vital

Chrome! It's not the metal the Spaniards devastated the cultures of the Aztecs and Incas to bring back to Europe, but it happens to be an absolute necessity for every country in the West that depends on high technology for its freedom. That makes it more precious than gold or silver. To the average consumer, chrome is just something that is used to give his car a flashy appearance or to keep rust out of kitchenware. Not a precious metal at all. But to the guardians of a high technology society, chrome is the sine qua non that makes modern defense tick. It is the only available component that can be alloyed with other metals to withstand high temperatures under extreme stress.

There could be no space program without chrome. Nuclear submarines are dependent on it, missiles. Moreover, much of the communications structure of a modern society would fall to pieces without this metal. Politically, this puts the West in a terrible bind. Two-thirds of the available chrome ore comes from Rhodesia. There is chrome in Russia, in Turkey and in South Africa. The South African chrome is of poor quality and must be mixed with Rhodesian ore for good results. U.S. sources petered out economically some time ago, and what is left in the ground in this country would require such high-cost exploitation that it would be cheaper to pay through the nose to the Russians and Turks for what they would be willing to sell. In the case of war involving Russia, we would get nothing. The Turks could be another problem; we have not exactly pleased them by our failure to back their aspirations against the Greeks in Cyprus.

Facing Inevitable

The point is that we are probably destined to be wholly dependent on the good will of whatever black government may succeed the minority white regime of Ian Smith in Rhodesia. With two million blacks against 250,000 whites, it is hardly likely that majority rule can be denied in Rhodesia forever. But Smith, a most tenacious character, may hang on longer than anyone now suspects. And in the meantime, we need chrome. The unemployment in Pennsylvania's stainless steel country would be unbearable in case we lost it. We would not be getting it directly from Rhodesia if it were not for the Byrd Amendment, which permits us to bring it into this country despite the UN sanctions against trading with the "illegal" Rhodesian government. Sen. Hubert Humphrey and others on the steering and membership committees of an organization called Members of Congress for Peace Through Law think we should scrap the Byrd Amendment in order to curry favor with Rhodesian blacks. But this would force us to use up our stockpile of chrome with no assurance that it might be replenished.

It would also send the price of chrome sky-high. Conversely, this might help the Ian Smith government to clean up on the deal by selling through intermediaries to West Germany and to Russia itself, provided it could still get the chrome to the sea by way of South Africa. High chrome prices would mean a better break for the Rhodesian economy, and blacks would participate in the gains. (There is no economic apartheid in Rhodesia.) The Smith regime might be perpetuated in adversity.

The Upper Hand

Another trouble with waiting without chrome to see who wins — and when — in Rhodesia is that if the Cubans, with the Soviets behind them, are to be the determining factor in any guerrilla overthrow of the Smith regime, we would be dependent on Moscow for every Trident submarine or B-1 bomber we intend to build. In the estimation of Sen. Harry Byrd Jr. it would be ridiculous to repeal his amendment as long as the time factors affecting Rhodesian change are so uncertain. If a truly neutralist black regime is to take over in Rhodesia, it would want to sell to us anyway. If a pro-Russian, pro-Cuban regime wins, it won't matter what we do about the current UN embargo.

Meanwhile, there is a bare chance that the efforts of Zambia's President Kaunda and South Africa's Prime Minister Vorster to promote a "detente" between Ian Smith and his black neighbors can be resumed before guerrilla warfare gets out of hand.

The only sensible thing for us is to encourage detente here — and to load up with as much chrome as we can. Despite Hubert Humphrey, our stockpiles should be increased, not drawn down.

Area Towns Eligible

KINGSTON—Jack A. Massaro, Ulster County Supervisor of the Farmers Home Administration, has announced that his office has been notified that the towns of Rochester, Marlboro, Plattekill and Shawangunk have been declared eligible for emergency loan assistance to farmers whose buildings sustained physical damage from a tornado or high winds on March 21.

To be eligible for the emergency loan assistance, the person seeking the loan must be an established farmer doing business prior to the emergency designation; he must seek the needed credit first through other lenders and must prove, in writing, that he is unable to obtain the needed assistance through local lenders, the farmer must be a U.S. citizen. In addition, the damage must be directly related to and have occurred during the period of the disaster resulting in the emergency loan authorization.

It was noted that if a loan is made the amount would only cover the difference between the actual replacement costs and the amount not reimbursed by insurance. The interest rate is five per cent.

Applications, which will be accepted through June 2, 1976, are available from the Farmers Home Administration, U.S.D.A. Ag Service Center, 380 Washington Avenue, Kingston.

Shrine Speaker

KINGSTON—State Sen. Richard E. Schermerhorn, R-40th Dist., will be guest speaker at the May 1 dedication of a Freedom Shrine at Marlboro High School.

The 3 p.m. ceremony is being sponsored by the Exchange Club of Highland. The shrine is co-sponsored by Kingston Trust Company as a Bicentennial grant.

Vievey-Sutton Post 124 will provide a color guard.

Highland High School Principal Paul Georgini, John O'Donnell and members of the board of education will accept the shrine from Lewis C. DiStasi of the Exchange Club.

A large representation of Marlboro citizens are encouraged to attend and join in the celebration of the dedication. The Freedom Shrine is a project exclusively of the National Exchange Clubs and consists of 28 laminated plaques containing duplicates of the great documents in American History. The Exchange Clubs install the plaques only in historic places so that students and citizens can read the thoughts and ideas significant in our history, enabling them to better participate in democracy.

Screening Tests

KINGSTON—Eligible area residents are being urged to register for free coronary screening tests to be given April 27-29 from 1:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Senate Gymnasium, Ulster County Community College, according to Brendon D. Alexander, president of the Mid-Hudson Chapter of the American Heart Association.

Persons between 18 and 65 who are not under a doctor's care are eligible. A number of pertinent tests will be administered and screeners will receive on-site professional counselling.

To take advantage of the free screening, persons must register in advance by calling 338-8553 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on April 20-22.

Volunteers are also needed to help with the program and should contact either the Junior League or the heart office directly.

Extra Session

KINGSTON—The Kingston City Schools will be open this Thursday for a half-day session.

The extra session is necessary due to the number of days that school was closed during the winter because of inclement weather.

The afternoon kindergarten will be picked up and will arrive at school at approximately 10:15 at which time the morning kindergarten classes will be dismissed.

Elementary schools will be dismissed at 11:30 and secondary schools at 12 noon.

Gourmet Leftovers

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

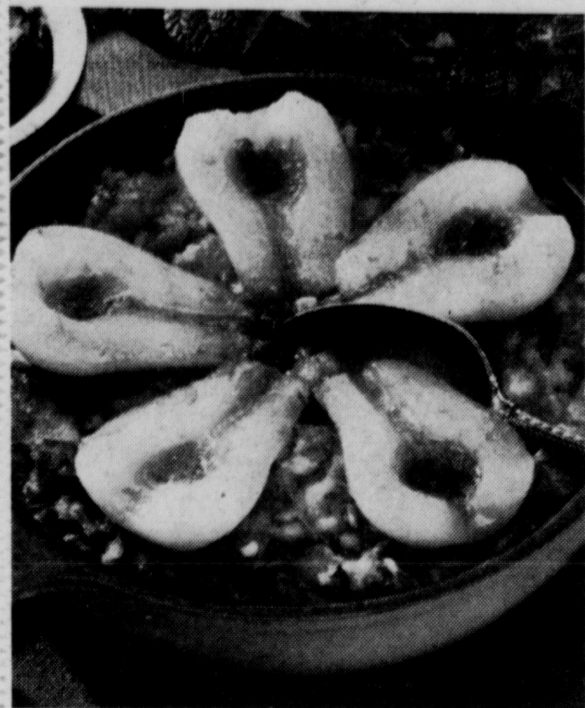

What to do with leftovers continues a major problem in most homes since buying meats, for example, in larger quantities usually is more economical. For ham lovers here is a solution. Dice up some leftover ham and combine it in a casserole with yams, croutons and canned Bartlett pears. And it doesn't hurt the palate a bit to discover the flavoring from sour cream and brown sugar, either. Serve this casserole with a green vegetable or a salad.

PEAR-HAM-YAM BAKE

- 1 (16 ounce) can Bartlett pears
- 2 cups diced cooked ham
- 2 cups diced cooked yams or sweet potatoes

- 1 cup herb seasoned croutons
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 1/4 cup finely chopped onion
- 1/4 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons soft butter
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel

Drain pears, reserving one-half cup syrup. Combine ham, yams, croutons, celery, onion, sour cream, reserved pear syrup, salt, pepper and melted butter. Place in buttered casserole. Bake in a 375-degree oven 20 minutes. Arrange pear halves, cut side up, on top. Combine brown sugar, soft butter and orange peel. Sprinkle over pears. Place under broiler to glaze pears. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

TOP HAM and yam casserole with canned Bartlett pears.

An Abbreviated Easter Feast

That Kitchen Bible, "The Joy of Cooking" defines eternity as a ham and two people. If there will be less than a quorum at your Easter table, here's an abbreviated feast that will last less than an eternity.

Orange Cherry Ham
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Broccoli with Lemon Butter
Lettuce wedges with French Dressing
Fresh Pears with Cheese

The sweet potatoes can be placed in the oven at the same time as the Orange Cherry Ham. Make Lemon Butter ahead to have on hand whenever you want a truly great flavor for everyday vegetables. Cream 1/4 cup butter. Add 1 teaspoon of fresh grated lemon peel and 1 tablespoon of fresh lemon juice, mixing well. Reshape into cube and refrigerate to harden. Cut into pats for serving.

For a quick but effective dinner centerpiece, use a low dish or basket. Place a candle in center and surround it with colorful oranges, lemons and your dessert pears. Looks great and you're all ready for dessert, too!

Orange Cherry Ham
1 ham center slice, 1-1/2 inches thick (about 2-1/2 pounds)
1/2 cup cherry preserves

1/4 cup prepared mustard
2 California-Arizona oranges, peeled, cut in cartwheels
Score and stud ham with cloves; place in shallow baking dish. Combine preserves and mustard; spoon over ham. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 50 minutes. Arrange orange cartwheels over top. Bake 10 minutes longer or until oranges are heated. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Simmer Those Easter Eggs

Easter eggs should not be boiled!

That may come as news to some who are getting ready for the annual decorating carnival, but home economists at United States Stamping Company, manufacturers of ceramic on steel cookware, point out that eggs should be simmered gently over low heat for about 20 minutes. After cooking, pour off the hot water and fill the pan with cold water so that the shells will peel off easily when the eggs are ready to be eaten.

U. S. Stamping suggests a clever egg decorating idea. With a little construction paper, cotton and glue, it's easy to turn a decorated egg into an Easter Bunny.

Color the egg pale pink, and fashion ears from pink construction paper. After cutting out the ears, crease them down the middle, spread glue on the back, and apply small bits of cotton. Make eyes from fringed construction paper, a nose and mouth from bits of red paper, and whiskers from thin strips of black paper.

White shell eggs are better for decorating, but for any other purpose, shell color doesn't matter. Color of the shell is determined by the breed of the hen and does not affect the grade, nutritive value, flavor or cooking performance of the egg.

If you intend to eat the decorated eggs, U. S. Stamping's home economists say the eggs must be kept refrigerated. Use them as a table decoration once for no longer than two hours. Then they can still be eaten. Otherwise, just use the eggs as decorations and don't plan to eat them.

She's Helping Little Friends

ACCORD — Although Mrs. Milton H. Wagenfohr lives in Accord, part of her heart remains behind in a remote little Mexican village for in El Testeraza she has two young friends in whose lives she plays a big part. They are a young boy and girl, Rogelio and Blanca, whom she sponsors through Save the Children Federation, worldwide child help organization with headquarters in Westport, Conn.

After starting a long-distance friendship with them via correspondence, Mrs. Wagen-fahr decided to pay their home a visit. Although both children were away at school, she recently met their families and toured their little village.

On every hand were physical evidences of the way in which her sponsorship funds were improving the environment not only for her two particular proteges, but for all the needy children of El Testeraza.

Among the self-help projects which Mrs. Wagenfohr's and other sponsors' contributions are helping fund are a family vegetable garden project, new potable water supply, sewing classes for the girls and women, community center repairs, provisions of scholarships to promising students, and school supplies.

Funded in 1932, Save the Children Federation today sponsors 30,000 children and aids more than 100,000 through their families and communities in Appalachia, on American Indian reservations, Inner Cities and among Chicanos and Southern Blacks, and in many countries overseas. The Federation is a member of the International Union for Child Welfare. An individual, school or group interested in helping a child should write to SCF, Wilton Road, Dept. P., Westport Conn. 06880.

KINGSTON — On Maundy Thursday (April 15) at 9:30 a.m., all women of the Kingston area and the Reformed Church of the Classis of Ulster are invited to the Fair Street Church to observe its 15th annual "White Breakfast" sponsored by the Women's Guild for Christian Service.

The name "White" refers to a traditional liturgical color which associates Christ as the light of the world and is a reminder of the purity of his life which is sacrificed on behalf of the sins of mankind.

Garvey Heads Area Horsemen

NEWBURGH — A new, all-breed, horsemen's association specializing in all phases of trail riding has been organized with Bruce L. Garvey of Newburgh elected executive officer. Called Hudson Highlands Horsemen, the organization has an initial membership of 60 with a goal set at 100. Membership already includes horsemen covering a 75-mile radius from Long Island to Saugerties.

Also taking office as of April 1 were Robert VanKueren of New Paltz, first vice president; Ida Darrah of Wallkill, second vice president; Marge Gardner of Highland, executive secretary; Carol Staley of Kingston, recording secretary; Edward Garland of Cottekill, finance officer; David Monell of Newburgh, junior division chairman; Vicent Rhinardo of Highland, sergeant-at-arms. Elected directors are Elvin

Adams of Newburgh, Daniel Elkins of Kingston, Kathleen Henebery of Newburgh, Fred Kaufmann of Pleasant Valley, Salvatore Pisciotto of Gardiner, Gail Treinor of Highland, Jean Van Keuren of New Paltz and Kaaren Wootten of Highland.

The new organization, also known as "Triple H Field Cavalry," is determined to become one of the finest cavalry associations of its kind, to produce champion horses and horsemen, to become affiliated with all major trailing riding associations, and to serve the public in whatever way possible. The group is seeking to be known as "the active club."

Hudson Highlands Horsemen will hold its first annual Spring Trail Ride Saturday, April 24. The ride will cover 25-30 miles through the scenic Shawangunk Mountains and the Lake Mohonk Area. Public is invited to participate at a very nominal fee. Lunch on the mountain top will be catered.

Details and information may be obtained through April 21 by writing: Hudson Highlands Horsemen, P.O. Box 2732, Newburgh, N.Y. 12550. The April 21 membership meeting will be held at Spanish Bits Stables, Plattkill at 7:30 p.m. Prospective members are invited to attend.

Dear Abby

It's the Name

DEAR ABBY: Irving and I have been married for a little over a year. It's the second marriage for both of us.

First, I want it clearly understood that I had nothing to do with breaking up Irving's 21-year-old marriage. When I went to work for his company, his marriage was already turning sour even though he was still living at home for appearance's sake.

The problem: Irving's business is named after his ex-wife. She never was in this business and contributed nothing to its success. It has grown into a multimillion-dollar corporation, and Irving owns it all. (He manufactures a commercial product that bears his ex-wife's name, and I detest the sound of it!)

I have asked Irving to change the name of the company because it upsets me to hear it. He says I am asking him to do a most unreasonable thing because it would cost a fortune to change the name now, and he simply cannot do it.

Abby, I know he can do it if he really wants to. Am I wrong to insist on this one favor?—NUMBER TWO

DEAR NUMBER TWO: Being a business woman you should know how costly and impractical changing the name of a successfully established product would be. I suggest you go to work on changing your attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl with a very upsetting problem, but I can't tell anyone because they wouldn't believe me.

My dad comes into my bedroom during the night and plays with my body. I get so scared I don't know what to do. I was going to tell my mom, but she would be so hurt, and I don't know if she would even believe me.

My dad acts like nothing has happened the next day, and I can't even stand the sight of him anymore.

Don't tell me to talk to a counselor or a preacher. I wouldn't be able to look anybody in the face and talk about it.

Please tell me what to do. He doesn't use any precautions, and I am afraid I might get pregnant.

I can't give you my name because I don't want to cause any trouble and don't want to be disgraced.—CANT TALK IN OHIO

DEAR CANT: You must tell your mother at once! If she doesn't believe you, call the Child Protective Services unit of your County Welfare or Probation Department and tell them that Abby told you to call. Then tell them the whole story.

Your father is a very sick man and needs treatment. Please act at once and let me know immediately what happens. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school principal who has had it up to here with thoughtless parents who just pop in at their convenience for a special conference.

Will you please ask parents who want to discuss a problem concerning their child to phone for an appointment or write a note?

Other professionals do not accept walk-in conferences except in cases of emergency. Last week I had 16 walk-in meetings with parents! My time is scheduled, and I just can't see all these people who want to see me when it suits them.—HAD IT IN FULL-ERTON

DEAR HAD IT: You aren't the only one with this problem. Many teachers have complained, too. I hope this helps.

Frozen Pareve Chocolate Cream

1/4 pound (1 stick) margarine
4 extra large eggs, separated
3/4 cup sugar
1/8 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons cocoa
1 tablespoon wine or brandy

Beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually beat in one-fourth cup sugar until stiff. Set aside.

Without washing beater, cream margarine and one-half cup sugar gradually. Beat in egg yolks, cocoa, cinnamon and wine, blending thoroughly. Fold in egg whites. Turn into 9-inch foil pan. If desired, sprinkle with macaroon crumbs or chopped nuts. Makes 8 servings. Freeze.

New Paltz Chapter Aiding Tom Dooley Heritage Drive

NEW PALTZ—Former An Lac Supporters will be assisting Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc. in New York under its new name, The New Paltz Chapter of Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc. Area supporters have held fund-raisers for four years to help feed and clothe children housed at the orphanage co-founded by Dr. Thomas A. Dooley III and Madame Vu Thi Ngai, directress. An Lac closed in April of 1975.

Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc. has funded An Lac and several other orphanages in South Vietnam. Now the emphasis of the organization is to raise funds for a hospital to be built as a living memorial to Dr. Dooley.

Dr. Dooley's short life was spent serving the people of Southeast Asia. In 1954 he was involved in the Passage to Freedom when the Geneva Conference allowed people to leave North Vietnam at the close of the Indochina War.

Dr. Dooley was in the Navy and chosen for the assignment because he was fluent in French but before the program was finished he was in complete charge of setting up facilities to handle the refugees and give them medical assistance. At the close of his introduction to a mass of humanity who, as one of his corpsmen put it, "ain't got it so good," Dr. Dooley decided he was to return to Southeast Asia and bring "19th Century medicine to a 15th Century area"—the upper reaches of Laos near the Chinese border.

He remained until his death in 1961 at the age of 34. The new hospital will not have all the trappings of an American hospital but it will be adequate and it will be what Dr. Dooley would have wanted local supporters indicate. Negotiations are progressing and a location will be made definite in a few months. The New Paltz Chapter of

Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc., is commencing a fund raising project for the hospital. Individuals of the group and friends will be selling luncheon napkins for 75 cents per package. There are 10 designs from which to choose and a package contains 32 napkins. Mrs. James DiDonna, 10 Clifton Terrace may be contacted about orders.

Honored Guests

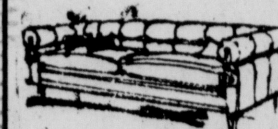

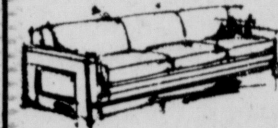

KINGSTON—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Ahl of Kingston were guests of honor at a family dinner-party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Every Sunday, April 4.

The occasion marked their 45th wedding anniversary. The event was hosted by their daughters and sons-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Charles Geldersleeve of Poughkeepsie; Mr. and Mrs. William Burr of Middletown and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Every of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Ahl were married April 5, 1931 in St. Peter's Church, Kingston, by the Rev. John P. Newmann, now deceased. The Ahls have 12 grandchildren and one great grandchild. Mr. Ahl was employed by the Ulster Department of Highways prior to his retirement.

Preservation Players Goal

HENSONVILLE — Preservation of the Catskill Mountain tradition and history through theatre performance is one of the prime objectives of the Catskill Mountain Players. That aim received a boost last week with a money grant to players from the Erpf Catskill Cultural Center, Inc. at Arkville in the amount of $1,500. The Center made the grant in the interests of promoting the performing arts and preserving history. The funds will be used by the Players to plan and develop 12 summer roadshow performances. Last year the Players began making a name for themselves with innovative performances of Chekov, Neil Simon, Gilbert and Sullivan and modern dance in Windham. To date, the Players have been funded only through theatre program advertisements and ticket sales, and the time they have devoted to rehearsals and productions has been donated. The money grant from the Center will enable the Mountain Players to take their road show on tour through an area encompassing four counties of the Catskills on a farm truck that is being converted into a stage unit. Plans call for at least 12 weekend performances and contracts have already been inked for engagements at the German Alps Festival, Catskill Waterfront Festival and Delhi Summer Festival. Any community organization interested in sponsoring the roadshow this summer should contact Catskill Mountain Players, Box 8, Hensonville, N.Y. 12439. Roadshow pieces to be performed are being developed from material based on tall tales, folklore, true stories and reminiscences of the Catskills. The material reflects the culture and history of the region as acquired through audio and video records of "old timers" telling their stories. The Players also urge local writers, poets and musicians interested in contributing fictional and non-fictional material to contact them. Also needed are actors, dancers, technicians, writers and people to collect resource material. In addition to roadshow performances, the Players will involve themselves in the education process through an Oral History workshop on a regional basis throughout the Catskills. Those interested in exploring the cultural heritage of the mountains in the informal atmosphere of the workshop through local community participation can also contact the Players. Additionally, the Players are developing a Children's Theatre Workshop for this summer to introduce nine-to-12-year-olds to the "Arts and Artists" of the Catskills. Young people will also be introduced to silkscreening, pottery, dance, video and theatre expression, and interested parents are invited to write or call the Players at the address noted above.

The brilliant, witty and inspiring musical, "1776" will be staged at the Rondout Valley High School on May 1st at 8 p.m. by the Continental Theatre Company of New York. Billed as an all-star, all-American hit, it is a rousing celebration of the shaping of America. The events that occurred in Independence Hall during the hot summer of 1776 are presented in a glowing musical re-telling the story of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Tickets are now on sale at the District office and donation is $4.50.

Liza Will Be Special Guest

Liza Minnelli with special guest star, Marvin Hamlisch, will be presented by the Westchester Premier Theatre April 16-April 25. One of the most polished and accomplished multi-talented stars in show business, Liza Minnelli has become the darling of critics and public alike, on Broadway, motion pictures, television, nightclubs and concerts. Since her Broadway debut at the age of 9 in "Flora, the Red Menace" she has "collected" various awards on her way to stardom. She copped the Academy Award for Best Actress and British Oscar for Best Actress in 1972, among others.

Liza has recently completed a movie, "A Matter of Time," in Rome, starring Ingrid Bergman and Charles Boyer to be released through American International Pictures.

Marvin Hamlisch, the 31 year old composer who is on his way to sweeping every musical award in the entertainment industry, began his musical career with a considerable achievement—at the age of seven, he became the youngest student admitted to Juilliard School of Music. His first hit record, written at age 16, was recorded by Lesley Gore. Since that time, he has received numerous nominations and awards. Hamlisch has copped three Academy Awards for: Best Original Song, Best Original Dramatic Score (The Way We Were) and Best Scoring (Adaptation of Scott Joplin's ragtime music for the score of the Sting). This year Hamlisch returned to his first creative love, the theatre, and "A Chorus Line" was the result. The show won the Drama Critics' Circle Award as "Best Musical of 1975."

Art

Cragmoor Celebration

CRAGMOOR—The Cragmoor Bicentennial Arts Celebration, July 8 to 12, will not only benefit the Cragmoor Free Library but offer the public a concert of music by American composers and an art exhibit.

The exhibit will include works of early artists who first established the summer art colony here in the 1870's. Paintings will be loaned for the occasion by the New York State Museum, Albany Institute of History and Art, Smithsonian Institute, private collectors and galleries. More than 100 paintings illustrating the works of E.L. Henry, Charles C. Curran, George Inness Jr., Edward Gay, Helen Turner, Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, J.G. Brown, Edmund Greacen, Carroll Brown and Arthur I. Keller will be included.

The American theatre will be represented by songs from the stage with a Bicentennial theme.

PBS Benefit

SCHENECTADY — The area's three commercial television stations, WRGB/6, WTEN/10, and WAST/13 have agreed to simulcast the WMHT/17 "TV Auction Game" on Monday, April 26 from 7:30 until 8 p.m.

These artists were attracted to the hamlet atop the Shawangunk Mountains in Southern Ulster County because it afforded unsurpassed views of the Catskill range and surrounding valleys.

The "TV Auction Game" is WMHT/17's largest yearly fund raising event in which more than 800 volunteers are working to raise $200,000 or more for the public broadcasting station.

The concert on July 11, will be given by Cragmoor Concerts, Inc., and will feature a full complement of American composers, 18th Century music, patriotic songs, marches from the Revolution. Works by black composers will be presented also.

Proceeds will be used to help pay the operating expenses of the public broadcasting station.

Music A Necessity

NEW PALTZ — "Music was and always will be a part of my life, like fresh air, it's a necessity," says Eda Fagon, musical and choral director of Ninety Miles Off Broadway.

The community theatre group will present "Of Thee I Sing" on May 6, 7 and 8 with curtains at 8:30 p.m. and a 2 p.m. matinee on May 9 in the New Paltz High School.

Regarded as a gifted woman in her field, Ms. Fagon has conducted, coached, composed and sung with the Chicago Opera and New York Philharmonic. For the New Paltz Production, this New Paltz resident of five years, will arrange the musical and choral numbers in the spring production of the Gershwin favorite.

Ms. Fagon says Gershwin's music "is one of my loves and I hope to reproduce those famous tunes with utmost accuracy in the upcoming musical. I saw the original production years back when it was on Broadway and this should help greatly in this present production."

Aside from her conducting responsibilities with Ninety Miles, Ms. Fagon has been also giving performances of her own.

Box office for "Of Thee I Sing" opens April 28 at 107 Main Street.

The ballet "Revelations," considered Alvin Ailey's masterpiece, will be the closing work on a program of the Alvin Ailey Repertory Workshop when it appears at the Poughkeepsie High School on April 24 at 8 p.m. Presented by the Performing Arts Festival, sponsored by the Hudson Valley Philharmonic and the Poughkeepsie Ballet Theatre, the work has become the signature piece of the Alvin Ailey company. The dance, using music of the Black tradition including spirituals, ring shows, and song sermons, builds to a finale in which the dancers, and most often the audience as well, burst into a joyous affirmation of hope. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Computer Art Vassar Topic

POUGHKEEPSIE—Thomas F. Banchoff will speak on "Computer Graphics, Art, and the Fourth Dimension" at Vassar College on Wednesday, April 21 at 8 p.m. Dr. Banchoff is a professor of mathematics at Brown University.

The lecture and computer graphics film presentation will be held in the main lounge of the College Center. The program is sponsored by the Department of Computer Science and is open to the public without charge.

A graduate of Notre Dame, the speaker received his Ph.D. in mathematics from the University of California at Berkeley in 1964. He was a Benjamin Pierce Lecturer in Mathematics at Harvard before going to Brown. His research interests are in the fields of differential and piecewise linear geometry.

Under a grant from the National Science Foundation, Dr. Banchoff and Charles Strauss of the computer science department at Brown began making computer graphic films approximately six years ago. The films, which Dr. Banchoff will present at Vassar, attempt to provide a better insight into the fourth dimension. This is done by considering all possible projections of objects in four-dimensional space into three-dimensional spaces.

Artist for April

ULSTER—Laura Schrader of Red Hook has turned painting into a successful career and this month is the featured artist in the Town of Ulster Library.

Her works have been exhibited at the Washington Square Outdoor Art Show, the Washington, Conn. Art Gallery, Crespi Gallery in New York City and the traveling art show of the International Art Exchange. She has won a number of first and second awards and has had paintings in shows throughout the Hudson Valley.

Plaza Easter Bunny

The Easter Bunny, with Diane Merrill as his authorized impersonator, had a busy day in the Kingston Plaza, giving candy to kids, and helping them have fun on the various kiddie rides provided by the Kingston Plaza Merchants Association. In addition, 30 families were winners in the association-sponsored ham giveaway. The Bunny's activities were only one of several such promotional events the association has planned as the Plaza celebrates its 12th birthday. (Freeman photo)

County Realtor Board To Hear Prof. Nadel

Nadel
KINGSTON — "Economic Trends and Their Effect on Real Property" will be the subject of Prof. Edward P. Nadel when he addresses the Ulster County Board of Realtors at their annual Realtor Week luncheon on Friday, April 23 at the Colonade Restaurant in the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Presently serving as professor of economics at the Ulster County Community College, Nadel is highly qualified in the subject he has chosen having served Goddard College in Vermont and the University of Maine before coming to UCCC. Nadel has conducted research and presented papers at York University in Canada on two occasions and has written for several publications. He has a B.A. from Queens College and an M.A. from Northwestern University. He was commencement speaker at UCCC in 1974 and on several occasions during the past three years has lectured to many groups on "The Economic Revolution of the 1970s."

He resides with his wife and three children in Stone Ridge.

A special feature of the luncheon will be the awarding of a plaque to a local board member chosen as "Realtor of the Year."

The public is invited to the luncheon and tickets and reservations can be obtained from the Ulster County Board of Realtors office in the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Ulster Savings Assets Exceed $150 Million

KINGSTON—Total assets of the Ulster Savings Bank exceeded the $150 million mark on April 5, for the first time ever, it was announced by Howard C. St. John, president. And it wasn't just a temporary breakthrough, according to St. John, who indicated, "When we passed—the $150 million level it was by a very comfortable margin of $189,000."

All of this increase was accomplished through natural growth, including four branch offices opened over the past five years. None of the growth was accomplished by merger. Ulster Savings Bank opened its first branch in New Paltz in 1971 and subsequently opened two branches in Poughkeepsie and one in Middletown.

As of April 1, the Ulster Savings Bank had $139 million in real estate mortgages, spread mostly between Ulster, Dutchess, Orange, Sullivan and Rockland counties. As a result of the Ulster Savings Bank's recently announced new mortgage policy, which includes 30-year mortgages with over 90 per cent financing in some cases, mortgage activity has increased to volumes not experienced since 1973.

St. John said he sincerely hopes that this new mortgage policy will stimulate home building and home buying in the Mid-Hudson area, thereby providing economic assistance to the overall region. Mr. St. John also stated, "About three-fourths of a million dollars in new residential mortgages were approved this past week by Ulster Savings Bank and we are pleased to be a leader in servicing the mortgage and other financial needs of our community."

New Area Shop to Serve SCUBA Needs

TOWN OF ULSTER—One of the fastest growing sports today is skin and SCUBA diving. This is true partly because of man's growing need to explore the seas, which has caused a new interest in our underwater world. The Underwater Shoppe, Boice's Lane, has just opened its doors to offer its services to area skin and SCUBA divers and people who would like to dive. The shoppe offers a complete program of skin and scuba diving courses leading to National Certification. This is required by law to dive in some states. In addition to instruction, the Shoppe offers a complete line of high quality diving equipment and service and backs both to the hilt. Professional quality mask, fins and snorkels that fit the individual; stock and custom made wet suits; diving gear and accessories and, of course, an air station that offers filtered compressed air for tank refills.

As part of the instruction program, equipment is supplied for the use of the students. This equipment is also available for rental by nationally certified divers. Another service offered to the community is underwater inspection and light salvage work by trained divers. This is primarily of interest to large boat owners and people who wish something retrieved from below.

Many divers like to take their vacations in the Caribbean or other areas where diving is super. The Shoppe offers a travel service whereby divers may join "The Underwater Adventurers Association" and qualify for group fares and special package rates.

Billy Cobham's Renaissance: The Thunder of Good Times

By Ray Townley

PHILADELPHIA—He had to humble himself and share top billing in his own group with a new addition - an old Mother at that - but Billy Cobham is back on his feet three hard years after leaving the Mahavishnu Orchestra. With Mahavishnu he'd emerged as a Thor of contemporary music, a formidable drummer considered among the best in progressive jazz. Then he decided to make it on his own. It didn't work out very well.

LOST CONTROL
"I had poor management and received poor advice," he says. He is tired after a high-powered set at the Tower Theatre, and his voice is surprisingly tender. For three years, he says, his reputation and his five Atlantic albums weren't enough to get him jobs in key markets like Chicago, Detroit, Atlanta and New Orleans. "I was strictly a regional act. There were simply a lot of forces out of my control that hurt me."

Cobham felt that Atlantic had not promoted him properly, especially in light of the success he'd had with the "Spectrum" album. He'd broken his ties with Sid Bernstein, who had been his agent for personal appearances. Last summer, the roof had caved in on him during a disastrous European tour.

"Dates started to fall out immediately," Billy recalls. "I never even got to meet the promoter. At that point I broke off with the Bernstein office. The tour grossed $60,000 for the band, but ended up costing $150,000. My whole personal life started to collapse. I got disillusioned with music. I didn't pick up my drumsticks from the middle of July to December 10th, when I did a record date for Quincy Jones. I didn't even keep a record player in the house."

TURNING IT AROUND
Bernstein admitted that he had trouble representing a non-vocal act and that, as Cobham's manager for personal appearances only, he could not get him the hit album required to back his tours. Cobham's new management, Mark Meyerson and Herb Cohen, has convinced Atlantic to support "A Funky Thide of Sings" and the just-released "Life and Times." A divorce and a move to California have helped to straighten out his personal life.

Most important to Cobham's renaissance is his newest musical aggregation, the tightly streamlined but clumsily named Billy Cobham-George Duke Band featuring Alphonso Johnson and John Scofield. It features ex-Mother of Invention Duke (also known as Dawilli Gongu) on eight different keyboards (including Mutron phasers and space echoes), recently departed Weather Report member Johnson on bass and Scofield on lead guitar.

Cobham holds court behind a battery of drums and cymbals that requires 19 mikes, two direct lines, a Moog drum and foot pedals to phase and equalize every percussion sound.

Duke, who spent three-and-a-half years with the Mothers and has played with Cannonball Adderley, Quincy Jones, Harry "Sweets" Edison and Airtio, is the most publicized of Cobham's new companions. He just recorded his fourth album, "Liberated Fantasy."

"At first I wanted to use George as a side man," Cobham says, "because I felt strongly that I had built up a name for myself. From past experiences with bands like Dreams, I learned that cooperative bands do not make it. However, Herb Cohen, who is also managing George, felt he was worth more than that. Finally, Doug Rauch, an unsung hero on the bass (he played on "Life and Times" but was replaced by Johnson for the tour), convinced me that George was worth a percentage. I decided he was right, went to George, humbled myself, and came to an agreement."

THE PROOF
The wisdom of Cobham's decision was proven at the Philly concert before an appreciative SRO house of 3,100. Following a set by Ronnie Laws, Cobham set the audience to screaming with the mere sight of his gigantic drum kit being rolled onto center stage.

Together for only four weeks, the quartet showed magnificent rapport. The frail, youthful Johnson laid down thick, evenly spaced bass anchors. Scofield and Duke traded urgent melody lines that lifted it toward the lightness of the old Mahavishnu Orchestra and Return to Forever. Cobham pushed the band with his constant thundering tom rolls and excellently controlled cymbal crashes.

If there was a key figure, though, it was Duke. He used his keyboards for highly visual coloring and managed to bend notes on the Arp so that they took on a weeping, near-human tone. In mid-show, he took command for a mini-set that included Frank Zappa's "Echidnas Arf," solo playing over a pre-recorded opera called "Tzina" and then "Uncle Remus," a talking blues. It was more than just another jazz-rock supersession.

Afterward, Cobham is pleased enough to prefer his new band to a rumored "supergroup situation" with Stanley Clarke and John McLaughlin.

"I made a strategic move in joining forces with very strong people - like Herb Cohen and Mark Meyerson, and with George, Alphonso and John Scofield. If you don't have elements that are going to say, 'OK, we're going to do it for you,' it's not going to happen."

The Spanking New Yankee Stadium

Shawkey Isn't Nervous About Stadium Opener

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — You should look so good as Bob Shawkey when you're 85. And be so happy and full of life.

He can't wait for tomorrow. That's when he throws out the first ball to get the New York Yankees underway in their home opener with the Minnesota Twins. Shawkey made a special trip from his home in Syracuse for the reopening of Yankee Stadium, closed two years while being remodeled, refurbished, reeverythinged, for somewhere between $80 million and $100 million.

He isn't nervous at all. No reason for him to be. He pitched for the Yankees the day Yankee Stadium originally was opened on April 18, 1923 and he wasn't nervous then when there were 74,000 on hand, so he certainly isn't going to break out in a cold sweat now when he's merely a spectator and the place accommodates only 54,000.

"Maybe the reason I wasn't nervous the day I pitched the opener in 1923 was because I watched Yankee Stadium being built," says Shawkey. "The most amazing thing about it is there was steel all over the ground when we went to training camp that spring, but when we got back, everything was all finished. The field looked smooth as a lawn. It was beautiful. We had played in the Polo Grounds before and we had some big crowds there, but never anything like the one we had the day Yankee Stadium opened.

"Years later," Shawkey laughs, "some of the boys in the league asked me, 'how did you have nerve to pitch before 74,000?' I told 'em all the same thing, you feel a little anxious at first, but after you get out there and start pitching, you forget about the crowd and about everything else and it's just another ball game."

Bob Shawkey came to the Yankees in the middle of 1915 from the Philadelphia A's, being one of those players sold by Connie Mack. Shawkey wasn't a run-of-the-mill pitcher. He had a fine fast ball, good control and a sharp mind, so sharp, in fact, the Yankees made him their manager in 1930.

Before that, though, he won 24 games for them in 1916. He also was a 20-game winner in 1918, 1919 and 1922. So he was manager Miller Huggins' natural choice to pitch the 1923 home opener against Howard Ehmke of the Boston Red Sox on the first day they opened Yankee Stadium.

"We saw that beautiful new stadium and it gave everybody more ambition to hustle," Shawkey says. "You could still smell the fresh paint. Anyway, the game with the Red Sox started and we went along there for a few innings with neither of us scoring. Along about the fourth inning, we got two on and the Babe came up and hit it into the bleachers for three runs."

Fittingly enough, Babe Ruth was the first man ever to hit a home run in Yankee Stadium and the blow carried Shawkey and the Yankees to a 4-1 win.

Not long afterwards, Yankee Stadium came to be known as "The House That Ruth Built," a catch-phrase originating with sports writer Fred Lieb. Shawkey was a good friend of Ruth's when they were teammates and that didn't pose any problem when he later became his manager.

"He was just a big kid," says Shawkey. "He never had trouble with anyone. He never hurt anyone."

Ruth began his career in Boston and spent better than five years with the Red Sox, but to him, Yankee Stadium always was home.

There is something about the place which produces a sense of awe the first time you come upon it sitting there so quietly, so majestically, in the southwest section of the Bronx. To New York visitors, Yankee Stadium has become almost as much a landmark as the Statue of Liberty, the Empire State Building or Times Square.

Mickey Mantle still dreams about Yankee Stadium sometimes.

He says one of his greatest thrills was simply walking inside it for the first time in 1951. He had never seen a ballpark with three decks before.

I remember one of the first times my father took me to Yankee Stadium in 1932. I was 10 years old, the Yankees were playing Cleveland and I sat in the left field bleachers right next to the Indians' bullpen.

The Yanks scored a lot of runs that afternoon. They generally did in those days and the Cleveland bullpen was kept pretty busy. Willis Hudlin, Clint Brown and Sarge Connally warmed up repeatedly.

At one point, someone in the bleachers tossed a rubber ball into the Cleveland bullpen. Sarge Connally picked it up and handed it to me through the fence.

I must've kept that beat-up old rubber ball five years.

a good ballclub."

One measure of a first-rate club is whether the other players pick up the slack when a teammate falters. Tuesday night, the Reds' big guns of Bench, Joe Morgan and Tony Perez all went hitless. No matter. Concepcion poked his first homer, Bob Bailey delivered a pinch-hit RBI single, Griffey singled in two runs and Cesar Geronimo and Pete Rose each stroked RBI singles.

Speaking of his players, Anderson said: "If they were all to hit at the same time, it would be a sight to behold." A sight other teams would rather not see.

In other games, Pittsburgh drubbed St. Louis 14-4, Chicago edged the New York Mets 5-4, Houston clipped San Francisco 3-1 and San Diego downed Los Angeles 8-5.

In the American League, New York trounced Baltimore 7-1, Boston beat Cleveland 7-4, Milwaukee nipped Detroit 1-0, Chicago trimmed Minnesota 4-1, Texas downed Oakland 3-1 and Kansas City dumped California 7-4.

Pirates 14, Cardinals 4

Dave Parker drove in five runs with a home run, a single and a sacrifice fly to back up Jerry Reuss' six-hit pitching in powering Pittsburgh past St. Louis. Every Pirate scored at least one run and all but two had hits as they earned their third straight victory. Pittsburgh, the defending NL East champion, exploded for five runs in both the second and fifth innings.

Cubs 5, Mets 4

Manny Trillo tripled with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning and scored the winning run on Rick Monday's single to short center field to lift the Cubs over the Mets before a record opening day crowd of 44,818 in Chicago.

Astros 2, Giants 1

Consecutive run-scoring singles by light-hitting Skip Jutze and Roger Metzger gave Houston its victory over San Francisco, which wasted six hits and left 10 runners stranded during the first five innings.

Padres 8, Dodgers 5

Dave Winfield drilled a grand slam homer off reliever Stan Wall to cap a seven-run San Diego outburst in the seventh inning that carried the Padres over Los Angeles before a crowd of 52,703—the largest opening day turnout in the Dodgers' 15-year Los Angeles tenure. The Padres' victory snapped Burt Hooton's 12-game winning streak and handed the Dodgers their third loss without a win this season.

Bullets Had Last Laugh

Everything was against the Washington Bullets Tuesday night except the final score.

A record NBA playoff crowd of 19,974 jammed the Coliseum in the first NBA playoff game ever in northeast Ohio only to watch the Bullets jump out to a quick lead and hang on for a 100-95 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Bullets now hold a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven playoff series going into Thursday's game at Landover, Md.

The Bullets hit a sizzling 16-of-24 from the field and canned eight straight shots after Dave Bing missed the first shot of the game to lead 37-19 at the end of the first period.

"I'm glad we got off to a fast start," said Washington Coach K.C. Jones. "The ball was going in for us. The victory is not only big because we won here. It's big whenever you take that first game."

Elvin Hayes, with 13 first period points and a game high 28, led the Bullets' charge. Bing added 24 points.

"We felt it was our time to win one here. We felt we had to go out and play twice as hard," said Hayes, who also hauled down 18 of the Bullets' 51 rebounds. "The Cavs are a great offensive and defensive team. They will be tough and we have to stay tough."

Cleveland trailed 78-60 going into the final 12 minutes but reeled off nine unanswered points and held the Bullets without a basket in the first four minutes of the last quarter. The Cavs cut the lead to nine points twice after trailing by as much as 23 and got within eight points at 95-87 with 1:56 left.

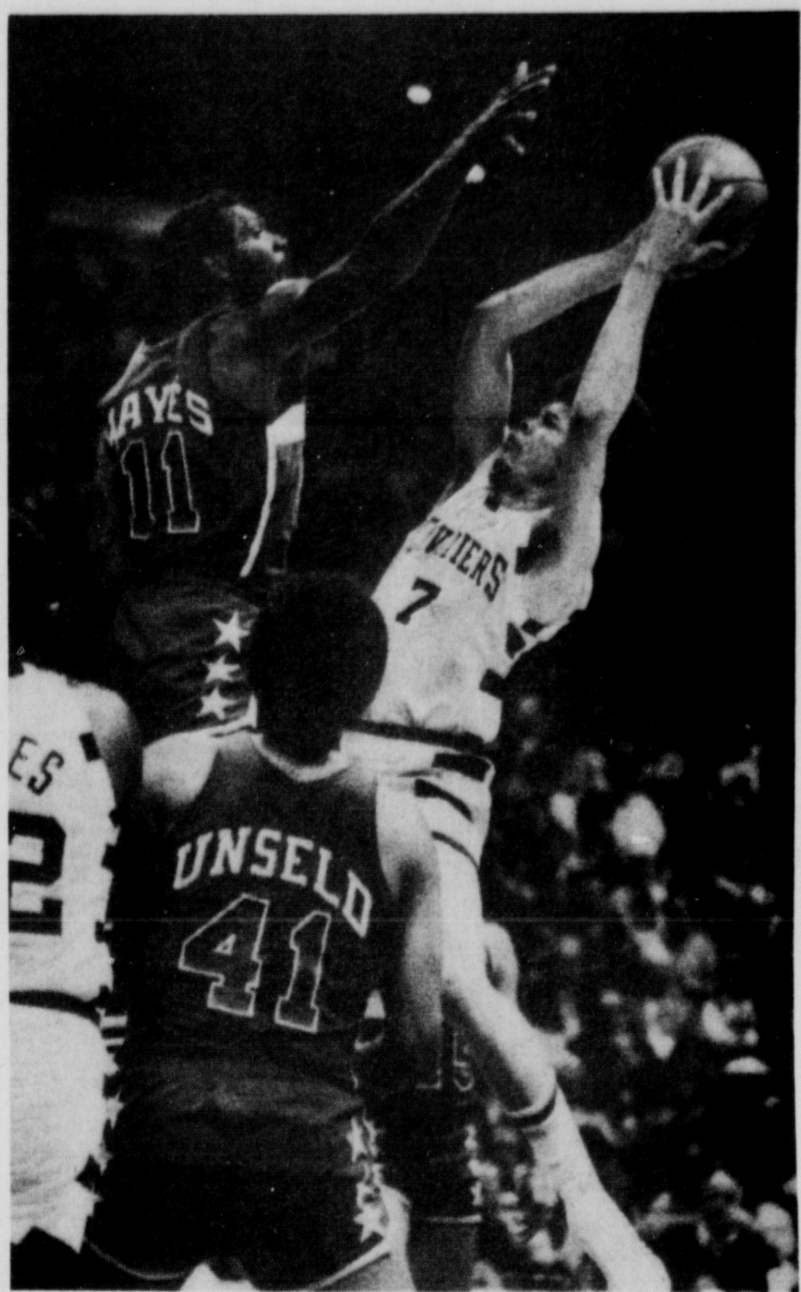

Hayes scored 24 seconds later but Jimmy Clemons and Jim Chones countered with baskets to cut the Washington lead to 97-91 with 43 seconds left. Bing stole the ball from Clemons and Hayes put the game out of reach on a free throw with 27 seconds left.

"We have never been in a playoff game before," said Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch. "We got off to a real bad start and we had a run at them, but they are tough. What we did in the second half tonight we may not be able to do in Washington."

In other NBA playoff action, Milwaukee stopped Detroit 110-107 and Seattle defeated Phoenix 102-99. There were no ABA playoff games.

Bucks 110, Pistons 107

their best-of-three series. Dave Meyers hit three free throws to tie the score 81-81 in the opening minutes of the final period and the Bucks went on to open up their largest lead 100-92 with 3:10 left.

Sonics 102, Suns 99

Sixth man Fred Brown scored 20 of his

Same Old Veeck Magic

By UPI

Bill Veeck is out to prove that Baseball 1976 is no different from baseball of any other year —and so far the maverick owner of the Chicago White Sox is having the last laugh on his American League peers.

Upon purchasing the White Sox this past winter, Veeck drew his share of guffaws for hiring 67-year old Paul Richards as his field manager. And the laughter didn't die down much when Veeck began installing grass at Comiskey Park while everyone else was raving about the merits of artificial turf.

Finally, in an age which has seen the Cincinnati Reds and Oakland A's put together championship teams with the emphasis on relief pitching, Veeck and Richards have taken their relievers out of the bullpen and transformed them into starters.

But for those folks who claim baseball is a changing game, the first returns of Veeck's "throwback" innovations are ominous.

Witness Rich Gossage, last season's top reliever in the American League with 26 saves, nine victories and a 1.84 earned run average, who made his first appearance of 1976 Tuesday—as a starter—and went the distance in beating the Minnesota Twins 4-1 on three hits.

"I didn't really think I could hold on but I got my second wind in the seventh inning," said Gossage, who struck out eight and retired 14 straight in the late innings. "Once I got that second wind, I knew I could finish up. Those 1-2-3 innings helped a lot."

Richards, meanwhile, was elated about his decision to move Gossage into his starting rotation.

"I'm not at all surprised at the way Rich pitched," he said. "I don't know why they made a relief pitcher out of him last year. The way he pitches he can do his own relieving."

The White Sox put the game away for Gossage in the eighth inning when with the score tied 1-1, Jorge Orta singled home Chet Lemon and then went to third when the ball bounced off right fielder Dan Ford. Orta scored on Carlos May's single and Jim Spencer doubled in May to make it 4-1.

Elsewhere in the American League Tuesday, the New York Yankees downed the Baltimore Orioles 7-1, Boston bested Cleveland 7-4 and Milwaukee whitewashed Detroit 1-0, Kansas City stopped California 7-4 and Texas topped Oakland 3-1.

In the National League, Pittsburgh routed St. Louis 14-4, Chicago edged the New York Mets 5-4, Cincinnati whipped Atlanta 6-1, Houston shaded San Francisco 2-1 and San Diego beat Los Angeles 8-5.

Red Sox 7, Indians 4

Fred Lynn, the AL's Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year in 1975, singled home Denny Doyle with the tie-breaking run in the fifth inning and Reggie Cleveland hurled 5 1-3 innings of two-hit relief as Boston beat Cleveland in its home opener. Carlton Fisk hit a leadoff homer in the sixth for a Red Sox insurance run.

Yankees 7, Orioles 1

Dock Ellis, making his AL debut after eight stormy years in Pittsburgh, scattered seven hits in pitching the Yankees past Baltimore. Graig Nettles, Roy White and Willie Randolph swatted home runs for the Yankees. Nettles had a two-run shot in the third, while Randolph, who came from Pittsburgh with Ellis, chased loser Jim Palmer with a solo homer in the fourth.

Royals 7, Angels 4

Hal MacRae singled home a pair of runs during a four-run third inning and Amos Otis tripled home what prove to be the game winning runs in the seventh to highlight the Royals' win over California. Al Fitzmorris was the winner for Kansas City while Andy Hassler dropped his 12th straight game for the Angels.

Rangers 3, A's 1

Southpaw Steve Barr, acquired by Texas in the off-season trade that sent Ferguson Jenkins to Boston, paid the Rangers a quick dividend by limiting Oakland to four hits. Barr, who didn't surrender a hit until the sixth, was staked a 2-0 lead in the first when Mike Hargrove singled home one run and scored the other on Roy Howell's infield grounder.

Brewers 1, Tigers 0

Jim Slaton, who lost his last eight decisions of 1975, hurled his second straight shutout of the young '76 campaign—a two-hitter—to spoil the home opener of the Tigers. Slaton, who shut out the Yankees and Catfish Hunter last week, got the only run he needed in the top of the ninth when Charlie Moore's sacrifice fly brought home Sixto Lezcano.

Reds Bursting Bubbles

By UPI

For the first six innings Tuesday night, it looked as though the Atlanta Braves were going to do what no other team has done so far this year—beat Cincinnati—and by a shutout yet. But the Reds burst that bubble as they have so many others.

Dave Concepcion, a shortstop not known for his power, tied the game with a solo homer in the seventh. The dam burst in the eighth as the visiting Reds turned five hits into five runs to rout the Braves 6-1.

Reds Manager Sparky Anderson was taking nothing for granted.

"I know we're good but when you're trailing, you worry about it until you get ahead," he said.

Getting ahead has hardly been a problem for the Reds this season as the defending World Champions have scored 39 runs in winning their first four games. The team is batting .355, despite All-Star catcher Johnny Bench's .118 average.

"We're better than last year," Anderson said. "Some of our young guys, like Foster and Griffey, had good seasons last year and it gave them a lot of confidence."

Anderson, who oozes confidence himself, assessed the Reds' prospects.

"I'm not saying we're going to win this thing this year but if somebody is going to beat us, they're going to have to have

I fought but there have been reasons. Now I don't want to get back in the ring until I'm in top shape."

Quarry, who was 35-0 before being knocked out in four rounds by Bob Foster in June, 1973, at Las Vegas, Nev., has just moved back permanently to Southern California from Orlando, Fla. He has a 53-7-3 record but four of his defeats came three years ago when he was hampered by a viral infection.

Then there's the matter of a bad marriage. He was married three years and the couple, which has no children, has been separated for three months. His wife is living in Massachusetts and he has sold their home at San Luis Obispo, Calif., and has moved to Westminster, Calif. Although he has returned to Los Angeles, his manager still is Pete Ashlock of Orlando.

"Pete was the reason I went to Florida to fight in the first place," the personable Quarry said. "Then for three years I commuted back and forth to my home in San Luis Obispo. Talk about being king of the road. Boy, I was that and then some."

"Looking back now, it was a big mistake. I'd go to the gym in Florida and everybody stood around watching me. I was really something there. I was a world-rated fighter. In Los Angeles, I'm just one of the guys. When I go to the gym here, it's a battle to survive. There's plenty of competition and that's what a fighter thrives on."

Quarry Asks Mike to Quit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Retired heavy-weight Jerry Quarry and his younger brother, Mike, who still has light-heavyweight title aspirations, are at odds.

They're still close but Jerry wants Mike to quit boxing and Mike is determined to stay in the sport until he gets a second crack at a world championship.

"We've had a lot of discussions on the subject," said Mike, "and I suppose we'll have a lot more. He wants me to get out and I understand his feelings because I know all the disappointments and frustrations he had during his career."

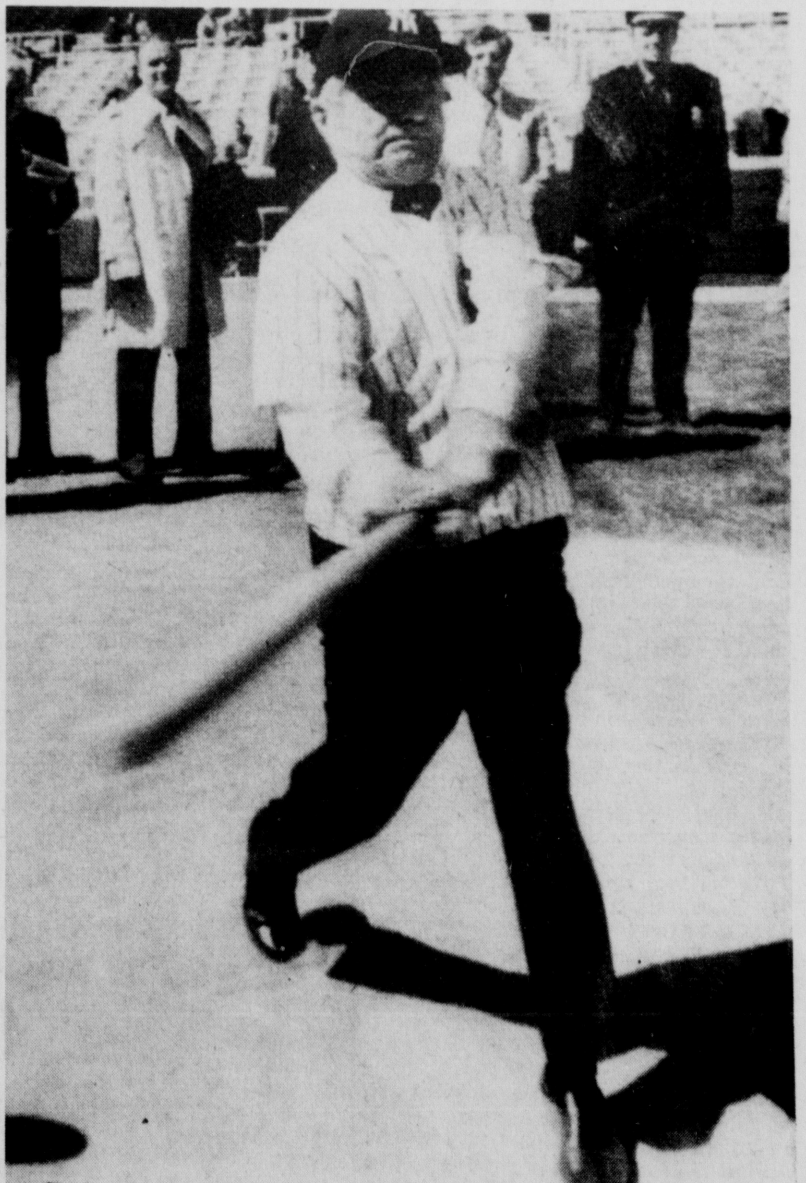

"But I think I can still win the title and I want one more shot at it before I'm through. It's not the money or the prestige that comes with a championship. It's a goal within myself."

"I still strongly believe in myself as a fighter and I believe I can fight at any level. Now all I need is the opportunity to find out."

Now 25 and still with boyishly handsome good looks, Mike is no longer ranked among the top 10 light heavyweights in the world. But he's got his eye on either Victor Galindez of Argentina, the World Boxing Association 175-pound king, or England's John Conteh, the World Boxing Council champion.

In his last start Oct. 25, Quarry fought on the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier card at Madison Square Garden in New York and scored a 10-round decision over Mike Rossman.

"I'm just getting back in shape," he explained. "I know it's been awhile since

Jack's Missing But Three Champs Are There

A Run for Mercy

Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali and Dick Gregory warm up outside Ali's office in Chicago Tuesday, after Ali urged support for Gregory's cross country food run designed to call attention to worldwide hunger and malnutrition. Gregory, 44, begins run in Los Angeles April 21 and hopes to reach New York City by July 4. (UPI) CARLSBAD, Calif. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus won't be here but the new Masters king, Ray Floyd, will be and so will U.S. Open champion Lou Graham and British Open titlist Tom Watson.

Also on hand in the crack field will be Hale Irwin, the tour's No. 1 money winner in 1976 after 14 tournaments with $136,174; Hubert Green, a three-time winner this year and the No. 2 money winner with $134,556, and Masters runner-up Ben Crenshaw, who rates third in the dollar derby in his fourth tour year with $133,098.

Floyd, who equalled Nicklaus' record 72-hole score of 271 at Augusta last week for a runaway eight-shot victory, will tee off today with 21 of pro golf's other elite in the first round of the $225,000 Tour-namment of Champions, sponsored by Mutual of New York.

At 24, Crenshaw is the youngest player here. At 52, Art Wall Jr., the 1959 PGA Player of the Year and victor in the Greater Milwaukee Open last year, is the oldest.

Wall joined the tour in 1950 and won the T of C in 1954 at Las Vegas, Nev.

"The big difference today from 20 years ago," Wall said, "is the way the kids come out of college. Just look at Ben Crenshaw. These kids are ready to win right after they close their books."

"When I first came on the tour, I wasn't prepared to be a winner for the first two years or so. We also have more accomplished players now. I'd say about 60 to 70 guys are capable of winning. Today's players are really consistently long and they're blessed with such a touch around the green. They could get down in two from one end of Rhode Island to the other.

"The golf courses are in better shape and the players have better equipment now but the guys don't shoot lights out because the pins are tucked in so tight."

Five of golf's 10 millionaires will be here, too, including 45-year-old Gene Littler of La Jolla, Calif., a three-time T of C winner who made $182,883 last year to rank fifth in money won. The other four are Johnny Miller, Tom Weiskopf, Bruce Crampton and Billy Casper.

272 holes in the 1975 T of C and Geiberger won with a birdie on the first sudden-death hole.

"Winning is the most important thing to me this year," said Geiberger, who has nine career triumphs. "I'd like to win any tournament I can but if I can win a major — everyone wants to win the U.S. Open — so much the better."

Geiberger already has one victory under his belt this year. Two weeks ago, he captured the Greater Greensboro Open by two shots.

Under the T of C format, only four winners since the last T of C event are eligible. Since 10 players have won two or more tournaments and five have won at least three, the field is a smallish 22 players. But that isn't a record low number of entrants. There were only 20 in 1953 and 1954, the first two years of the tournament in Las Vegas, Nev.

With 22 players, last place will be worth $4,300.

The 6,875-yard La Costa Country Club layout is one of the tour's most demanding courses. Frank Beard set the tournament record here with a 72-hole total of 273, 15 under par, in 1970. In 1969, the first year of the T of C at La Costa, Gary Player won with a four-under-par 284. A high rough accounted for the high scores.

New Vaulting Pole

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — James B. Vernon, 58, an associate professor of Mechanical Engineering at University of Southern California, said today he has invented a crooked pole, nicknamed the "Long Bow", which he feels could revolutionize pole vaulting.

Vernon, winner of pole vaulting gold medals in the 1975 World Masters Track and Fields Championships and the National Masters AAU Meet, says he constructed his new pole — hich simulates a curved bow — in an effort to better his own lifetime best of 11 feet, 7 inches.

He described his pole as being about a foot or more out of line from conventional models, with curvatures at each end. He makes them by altering regulation poles with fiber glass cloth and liquid resin.

Vernon said the benefits of his invention is that the vaulter loses less energy after the pole is planted and that with the proper stiffness, the vaulter can add more energy during the actual vault.

4-1 record with a hard fought 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 win over Loch Ochsmier.

Tony Kaplan of Vassar demolished Ken McGrady in the No. 4 singles, 6-0, 6-0, but Dave Brenner and Fred Chase wrapped up the next two singles for Coach Bob Durkin's squad. Brenner checked Bob Freedman 6-0, 6-3 and Chase survived a 6-2, 7-6 challenge from John Churchman.

Vassar won the No. 2 doubles, as Greenberg and Ochsmier combined to beat Chase and Brenner, 6-3, 6-3.

Kleinberg and Fred Chase then won over the Vassar tandem of Freedman and Jack Stein, 6-3, 6-2.

Tennis Hawks Win Fourth Match

NEW PALTZ — New Paltz State College's tennis squad turned back Vassar College, 6-3, for its fourth win in six matches to date.

Ron Coopersmith, State's No. 1 player, polished off Fred Williams in the No. 1 singles, 6-1, 6-1, and then combined with Ken McGrady in the No. 1 doubles where the Hawks received a forfeit when one of the Vassar players pulled up lame.

Blaine Greenberg of Vassar won over Mark Chase, 7-5, 6-1. Ron Kleinberg, the Catskill High ace, matched Coopersmith's

Sawyers Win and Tigers Lose

SPACKENKILL — Saugerties and Kingston High Schools met with mixed results in Tuesday's DCSL track openers. The Sawyers took the measure of host Spackenkill, 97-53, but the Tigers fell to a strong visiting team from John Jay, 107-43.

Double wins by Skip Fritz and Peter Beck paced the Saugerties' triumph. Fritz excelled in the sprints, taking the 100 in 10.9 and the 220 in 24.5. Beck won the high jump with a leap of 5-6 and doubled in the triple jump at 38-2 1/4.

The Sawyers won all but three first places in the meet.

The fruits of winter track were evident in John Jay's performance. Kingston, too, had to settle for just three first places as four Patriots scored double wins.

Sprinter Greg Thomas, hurdler Mike Cosgrove, weightman Jim Skaarva and jumper Matt Dorney were the John Jay leaders. The Tigers got their victories from Bill Wilson, who ran a 4:47 mile, Charlie Bevier, who did the two mile in 10:18, and Rudy Schlichting, who went 5-6 in the high jump.

Soph Bob Easter was also promising in his first outing with a second and a third in the jumps.

Jay Scores In Track

KINGSTON — A fine distance performance by Kingston High's Eileen Casey wasn't enough to lift the KHS girls past John Jay Tuesday in a DCSL track meet. Casey swept the mile and two mile runs, but the Patriot girls took home a 70-44 victory anyway.

Lisa Downey doubled in the 100 meter hurdles and the long jump, and the winners swept the places in four events to build their margin of victory. KHS couldn't crack the top three in the hurdles, the 440, the 880 or the 220.

Casey, who set all the records a year ago, picked up right where she left off with a fine 5:40.6 clocking in the mile and a 12:47 time in the two mile. Lynette Byrd in the 100, Kathy Pfeiffer in the shot put and Julie Chavis in the high jump were Kingston's other individual winners.

Saugerties Tops CHS

CATSKILL — Saugerties High's tennis varsity bounced back from losses in the No. 1 and No. 2 singles to defeat homes- standing Catskill High, 5-2, in a non-league match.

George Daley of Catskill defeated Darryl Jones in No. 1 singles, 7-5, 8-6 and Dave Mokszski turned back Ken Rumble, 6-3, 6-4.

The Sawyers swept the next three singles, as Bob Vogel beat Glen Coons 6-3, 4-6 and 6-2; and Paul Martin toppled Gary Steenburn 6-3, 7-5.

Jones and Rumble of Saugerties checked Daley and Chiorazzi 6-2, 7-5 in the No. 1 doubles and Vogel and Carpenter stopped Mokszski and Coons, 8-6, 6-2.

Rugby Team Wins Opener

KINGSTON — The fledgling Kingston Rugby Club evened its season record at 2-2 by defeating the Monroe Rugby Club 19-0 in its home opener at the Coleman High School field.

A good crowd turned out to watch the first rugby game every played in Kingston. Although some fans left early because of the cold weather, those who remained were treated to a fine game, characterized by excellent running and some spectacular tackling by the home team.

Fred Seeger had an excellent day both offensively and defensively and led the scoring with six points on two second half penalty kicks.

Fly-half Warren Reynolds scored five points, one on a penalty and one conversion while Steve Hanks and Tim White each scored on a "try" (similar to a touchdown in American football) worth four points each.

Kingston's next home game is scheduled Saturday against Columbia Business School of New York.

Hurley Seeking Boys

HURLEY — The Hurley Little League is seeking boys at least 13 years old interested in earning money this season as scorekeepers and umpires. Games will be evenings and Saturdays during May and June. Candidates must have a knowledge of the rules. For information call 338-3735 or 338-2620 evenings.

New Cowboy

MASSILLON, Ohio (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys have signed Mike Mauger, a 6-1, 215-pound Kent State running back passed over in the National Football League player draft, as a free agent.

Mauger called the three-year contract signed at his home Saturday "very pleasing to everyone concerned. I am pleased to get the opportunity to play," Mauger said, "especially for Dallas, one of the top organizations in pro football."

In SBA Tournament

Spada and Minkler Lead SBA Doubles with 1341

SAUGERTIES—John Spada and Don Minkler fired 1239 net and 1341 gross doubles in the 28th annual Saugerties Bowling Association tournament. But under the SBA rules, they were entitled to only one prize and selected high gross honors.

The prize for net doubles went to Fred Schreiner (536) and Otto Scheu (638) with 1174.

Spada contributed 576 net and 633 gross while Minkler was racking up 225, 246-663 net and 708 gross for the first place doubles, as they ground out a one-pin edge over Paul Legg (696 gross) and Jeff Young (644) who h-d 1340.

Bob Houtman (659) and Bill Brown (647) placed third with 1306. Robert Madsen (637) and Greg Foster (667) were fourth on 1304 and John Clark (644) and Joe Filicetto (657) fifth with 1301.

Paul Legg captured the singles championship with gross

696, with 526 in the wood and 170 handicap. Sam Shapiro was runnerup with 669 and Jeff Zindell third with 668. Others in the money were Bill McCormick 661, Wes Sparling 660, Joe Hinchey 655, Mitzie Arlensky 650 and Jim Graham 640.

Rich Rosendale won the scratch singles with 581 off 180, 193 and 208.

Don Minkler won the net all-events championship with a 1788 aggregate on 613 in the team event, 628 doubles and 547 singles.

Paul Legg emerged as the handicap all-events champion with 2020 gross. Terry Carlisle was runnerup with 1949. Bill McCormick had 1945, Otto Scheu 1924 and Walt Pawlus 1900.

McCormick, with an entered average of 137, earned an American Bowling Congress Century Award with a 243 solo, 106 pins over his average.

Rain or Shine, Ortega Keeps Running

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — It doesn't rain often in Albuquerque but sometimes it pours — and Lionel Ortega runs anyway.

Like many American long distance runners, Ortega wants to be one of the three marathoners who will represent the United States in the summer Olympic Games at Montreal.

So the 21-year-old University of New Mexico track and cross-country star runs — 25 to 29 miles a day, seven days a week — come rain or shine.

The former Albuquerque prep athlete is one of a few Olympic hopefuls in New Mexico with a realistic chance of making the U.S. track and field team, according to experts such as state AAU official Ray Weakley.

Others include fellow distance runners Rick Rojas, Tony Sandoval and world class women's star Lynn Bjorklund, all of Los Alamos, and UNM steeplechaser Jay Miller, of Albuquerque.

Rojas, 24, a former Harvard student who ran the marathon for the U.S. team in the Pan American Games at Mexico City last winter, is the best known.

Finn, Devine Schools Volleyball Champions

KINGSTON—More than 200 fifth and sixth grade girls of the 14 Kingston Elementary Sch-ols took part in the 6th annual Round Robin Volleyball Tournament at the Chambers School.

Sophie Finn School captured its fourth A Division title with a sparkling 11-1 record., losing only to Brigham School. Meagher placed second with a 10-2 record, its two losses being administered by the Finn team.

In the B Division, Anna Devine and Hurley would up in dead heat for first place with 11-1 records. A playoff ensued and Devine won the best-of-three playoff in straight sets, 15-9, 15-9.

More than 200 fifth and sixth grade girls of the 14 Kingston Elementary Schools took part in the 6th annual Round Robin Volleyball Tournament under the direction of Joseph G. Defino, Elementary Supervisor of Physical Education.

New Coach at Hartwick

ONEONTA—Hartwick College, one of the nation's leading soccer powers, today announced the appointment of James W. Lennox of Mitchell Junior College in New London, Conn., as the new soccer head coach. Lennox replaces Timo Liekoski, who recently joined the pro ranks as an assistant coach for the Dallas Tornados.

Lennox, who was named 1975 Junior College Coach of the Year, has a career record of 77 wins, 21 losses and 5 ties.

But it is Ortega who has traveled farthest toward the goal of making the Olympics, being the only one so far to qualify for the trials. He earned the chance by running the 26-miles-plus event in less than two hours and 20 minutes last December in the National AAU championships at Culver City, Calif.

"To get your way paid to the trials in May at Eugene, Ore., you have to run a 2:20 or better," said Ortega, who was third at Culver City. "But you can still go with a time of 2:22. Five (at Culver City) got their way paid and nine were under the qualifying time."

Ortega said he was unaware of his exact time because he was told both 2:18.19 and 2:19.16 by different meet officials. What counted, he said, was both of those clockings were good for a free ticket to Eugene.

Actually, Ortega paid his way in his own fashion.

Last fall, as parents drove their children to school in a downpour in southeast Albuquerque, Ortega was the solitary figure they saw doing countless half-mile laps around a park in the rain.

Rojas has been hampered by influenza. He hasn't competed since the Jan. 31 Albuquerque Jaycees Invitational when he finished the two-mile in a near dead heat for second place with Frank Shorter, a former New Mexican who won the Olympic marathon gold medal at Munich in 1972.

Preferring the shorter distances anyway, Rojas said he decided to concentrate on his good speed and try for the 10,000 meters — about six miles — and the 5,000 meter.

"I was invited to a road race — the "Maraton San Blas" — Feb. 8 in Puerto Rico but when I got there I ended up spending five days in bed," Rojas said. "They paid my way down there and I got the flu. Never did compete. At least I was able to practice my Spanish."

Rojas said the flu threw his training off schedule. He could no longer put in the kind of mileage required for the marathon — he currently runs 80 miles a week, half as far as Ortega.

Miss Bjorklund, 18, a freshman at UNM, is the American record-holder at 3,000 meters with a time of 9:08. She won the AAU women's national cross-country championship the past two years.

However, Lynn's Olympic fate is still uncertain. She is hampered by a back injury and normally does better at longer distances than the 1,500 meters, which is the limit in women's Olympic competition.

Sandoval, a distance star at Stanford University, was a member of the American team in international cross country competition. His friend and neighbor, Rojas, said Sandoval also plans to try for the 5,000 and 10,000 meters and should have as good a chance as most to be successful in the trials. Miller, 21, wants to run the 3,000 meter steeplechase. He has set a goal of cutting 12 seconds during meets in the next two months to qualify for the Olympic trials.

Then, there are the foreign athletes who run for college teams in New Mexico — such as Mike Boit of Kenya and Eastern New Mexico University. Boit represented his country in the 1972 Olympics, winning a bronze medal in the 800 meters and placing fourth in the 1,500 meters.

He hasn't slacked off since, posting the best 800 meter time anywhere in the world last year and being named the 1975 Collegiate Runner of the Year by "Track and Field News."

Boit led ENMU to a meet record in the college distance medley relay early this month at the Texas Relays.

On Opening Day

Present at the opening day ceremonies at Rondout Pool Golf and Tennis Association were (L-R) Richie Aaron, club pro; Dick Despres, club president, and Rich Quick, assistant pro. More than 100 persons turned out for the Opening Day, 1976 ceremonies. Helen B. Brown of Kerhonkson won the free membership drawing which entitles her to a free, full-family membership for 1976. Bob Kuster and Bob Sgroi conducted a closest-to-the-pin contest. The winners were Joan Kuster, Beth Aaron and Aggie Wilson among the women and Roger Anderson, Dick Despres and Bob Sgroi among the men. The next scheduled event of the golf calendar is a 9-hole Scotch Foursome on Sunday, April 25.

Money Pinch Irks Olympians

SYDNEY (UPI) — Australia may be one of the top athletic nations of the world but its athletes feel their country has let them down badly.

"Being an amateur athlete in Australia is like being down in the gutter," says Dennis Green, a canoeist and the country's longest serving Olympian. "Encouragement just doesn't exist in Australia."

"Australia really doesn't deserve to have the great champions we have produced," says Forbes Carlisle, one of Australia's leading swimming coaches.

The athletes are airing their views as the Australian Olympic team, preparing for the Montreal Games, continues to meet one hurdle after another in its way.

Among their complaints: primitive training methods, pitiful government support and woeful lack of money to finance the team's trip to Montreal.

Not long ago, medal winners roamed the cricket and soccer ovals throughout the country carrying blankets and appealing to sports fans to "toss in a few coins" to help get the Australian teams to the Games.

Ace athletes like Dawn Fraser, Murray Rose, Jon Hendricks and Lorraine Craps helped put Australia on the Olympic map during the 1956 Melbourne Games with 13 golds, 22 silver and bronzes to finish third behind the sporting giants, the United States and Soviet Union. But it has been downhill for Australia ever since.

In 1960 at Rome: eight golds. In 1964 at Tokyo: six golds. Then, thanks to swimming wonder Shane Gould and two unexpected yachting victories, the tally moved back to eight at Munich in 1972. The rot, however, has not been stemmed. Some coaches and athletes simply are giving up.

Don Talbot, one of the world's top swimming coaches, left Australia for Canada and has vowed never to return. His complaint, according to the Sydney Daily Mirror, is, "Under Australian conditions, coaches are granted status no better than pool attendants."

Under Talbot's coaching, Canada is threatening to edge Australia among the world's swimming powers.

Australian swimming team captain Graham Windeatt, who won a bronze at Munich, was forced to sell his sports car to raise $7,000 in fees for tuition under Talbot in Canada. Stephen Badger, 200-meter freestyle winner in the Commonwealth Games, has offered to swim for Canada at Montreal.

Olympic diver Kevin Grove gave up his Australian citizenship and returned with his wife to his native Austria where he was immediately given a scholarship at the Vienna Sports College.

That prompted Dawn Fraser, a former star and perhaps the greatest woman swimmer of all time, to say Australia should follow the United States in providing educational scholarship grants to athletes.

"We are such a backward country in sports," she said.

It will cost approximately $1 million to send a contingent of 250 Australian athletes and officials to the Summer Olympics. The Australian government is providing only $320,000. The remainder is being sought from commercial and industrial companies—and the public.

Quinn Wins

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Young Quinn, apparently boxed in with less than a quarter of a mile to go, suddenly found an opening and charged to his second straight $50,000 Provincial Cup win Sunday at Windsor Raceway.

The New Zealand-bred, 7-year-old gelding, handled by driver Joe Marsh Jr., was clocked at 1:58.6 and finished a length ahead of Leader's Dream and Fly Fly Solly. Young Quinn tied the track record of 1:56.6 in the 1975 Provincial Cup race, but a chilly 31 degree temperature reading and gusty winds prevented him from equalling that mark.

RAH Plans New Events

KINGSTON—The fast-growing Recreation Association for the Handicapped grew during 1975 from 15 persons in January to 89 by the end of the year, sponsoring 25 events with more to come this year.

Now is the time to join, or to renew membership, in the RAH, according to Diana Geiger of the Ulster County Association for Mental Health.

Members are entitled to free admission to all regular socials; discount passes to the Community and Mayfair Theaters in Kingston and the Academy Theater in New Paltz; trips and special events at reduced rates; and first priority for tickets and bus space on all RAH-sponsored events.

Members also help plan activities. The most recent was an April 10 trip with the Association for Retarded Children to the Ice Capades in Troy, with 88 on the list. A dinner dance will be held April 24 at the Walnut Grove on Field Court, Kingston, with reservations due by April 16 at Gateway Industries or at the Association for Retarded Children workshop.

List Cole Condition As 'Poor'

KINGSTON — Superintendent of Public Works Charles Cole was listed in poor condition this morning at Benedictine Hospital.

Cole is in the coronary care unit where he was admitted Monday after suffering a heart attack.

Robert E. Lee spent several months in Brownsville, Tex., as a lieutenant colonel investigating deserters from Mexican factions who were looting on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico border prior to the Civil War.

Rest of Manson Cult Sentenced

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Two of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson's followers, declaring the world was being "poisoned," are going to prison for threats made in a fervent campaign to rid the earth of pollution.

"The letters I wrote were warnings," Manson apostle Sandra Good, 31, told U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride shortly before he sentenced her Tuesday to 15 years.

"They were warnings to those who are committing destructive acts to the environment."

Referring to the Manson family, U.S. Assistant Attorney Bruce Babcock told a reporter after the court session, "As far as I know that is the last of the Manson family" and now "they're all in jail."

Miss Good, former roommate of would-be presidential assassin Lynette Fromme, and Susan Murphy, 33, a self-described "sister in Manson's church," were convicted March 16 of conspiring to mail threatening letters to corporate executives and government officials.

Miss Good also was found guilty of making threats in telephone conversations with reporters for the Detroit Free Press and radio stations in Altoona, Pa., New Orleans, and Hamilton, Ont.

Miss Murphy, a former alcoholic and convicted shoplifter, was sentenced to five years. She could be set free in 20 months while Miss Good will have to serve a minimum of five years before being eligible for parole.

Petitions Ready

RHINEBECK—Petitions for nominations of school board members are available at the office of the clerk of the board of education of Rhinebeck Central School. Petitions must be filed on or before May 10.

Blast Killed Mothers, Children Now Victims

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — The explosion at a munitions factory that killed at least 43 persons — most of them female — also has claimed another set of victims: the children now left motherless by the blast.

The Red Cross gathered the children into a school building Tuesday, providing food and lodging in makeshift quarters near the site of the explosion at Lapua, in western Finland.

Officials declined to say how many children would be housed there, but about 50 persons were helped at the center within hours of the blast.

ripped through a 1,000-square-foot building where more than a ton of gunpowder was stored. Only a brick shell was left standing.

The Defense Department said at least 43 were dead but that it was unable to determine immediately the exact death toll because of difficulty in matching various limbs. Authorities identified 29 bodies and said 25 were women.

The explosion, Finland's worst industrial accident, also injured more than 70 persons. Some 25 were in serious condition.

Flags in Lapua, a town of 15,000, were lowered to half staff. A session of Parliament in the capital stood in a memorial silence.

"The relatives of the victims and the injured will receive all the support they need," Premier Martti Miettunen said in a telegram to the Lapua Township, located 246 miles northwest of Helsinki.

Officials said about 60 persons were working in the building when the blast ripped through the complex, shattering windows a mile away.

"It felt like a wall falling on me," said Hilikka Palo, one of the workers.

The building was in the center of the 53-year-old factory complex. The explosion blew the roofs off four other buildings.

A five-man government team was set up to investigate the cause of the blast. The Defense Department gave the building safety approval two months ago.

"We have no idea what started the explosion," a Defense Department spokesman said.

The worst previous Finnish industrial accident occurred in 1948 when a cellulose factory exploded killing 18 persons and injuring 100.

The sun gives the earth six million times as much light as do all the stars put together.

Look at the Peace Corps, Past and Present

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Peace Corps is 15 years old and the celebrated government agency, born in the Kennedy era, has changed with the times.

For one thing, it's smaller and less visible. "When I tell people I work for the Peace Corps, their usual response is, 'I didn't realize it was still in existence,'" says Charles "Woody" Jewett, an agency placement officer and former volunteer in Ethiopia.

Jewett, now 32 and married, joined the Peace Corps one week after his graduation with a bachelor's degree in English from Hobart College at Geneva, N.Y., in 1966.

"I had always been fascinated by Africa, game parks, animals," he said.

He spent three months at UCLA training for a teaching position in Ethiopia with 100 other volunteers his age.

"I was caught up in a very idealistic time," he said. "Everyone was excited as hell by the idea of going over and being a teacher."

Volunteerism was at its peak. The Peace Corps had 15,556 volunteers in 48 countries, 912 of them in Ethiopia. Students were flocking to campus recruiting booths, lured by the promise of overseas travel, enriching experiences and — until 1970 — Vietnam draft deferments.

"Our attitude was 'come, we'll find something for you,'" one official remembered.

President Lyndon B. Johnson and Vice President Hubert Humphrey were two of the agency's biggest supporters. Its $114 million budget was a record high.

Once overseas, says Raphael "Skip" Semms, "the treatment they often received was just tremendous. They were viewed on par with an ambassador."

Semms also volunteered 10 years ago. Today, at age 33, he is director of the Independent Foundation, a private, nonprofit organization of former Peace Corps and VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) volunteers.

At the Ethiopian airport, Jewett was assigned to a junior high school in a small town. "There was the feeling that one person working within the Peace Corps could do something great," he said. "As it turned out, it was a very naive, unrealistic feeling. There was such a limited number of people you had any superficial contact with." Today there 6,690 volunteers — fewer than half the number a decade ago — spread over 68 countries, 20 more than in 1966. Only 33 volunteers now work in Ethiopia. Anti-Americanism and strong nationalistic sentiment there, as in other politically turbulent developing countries, has contributed to the decline in volunteer ranks. The Peace Corps has been asked to leave eight countries since Jewett and Semms joined 10 years ago, although some countries invited the volunteers to return when a new government took over.

Illiteracy Said No Bar to High School Diplomas

By UPI

Charles G. Clark, Hawaii's new school superintendent, contends students who cannot read should be awarded high school diplomas anyway.

Clark says a diploma should be based on attendance and not on academic achievement. He says some students "will never learn to read in spite of everything that has been done for them" and they should not be "punished" for their failures.

Results of college entrance examinations indicate today's high school grads are less prepared in reading and writing skills than ever before. Despite all the hoopla about improved reading programs, test scores keep dropping.

"There aren't any real standards for getting out of high school anymore," said Jerry Hitt, admissions director at Georgia Tech University.

"Generally speaking," said William Smith, linguistics professor at Boston College, "kids are going through high school and many can't read or write. Students are kept in school and not flunked out because society doesn't want young kids out on the streets. They are willing to wait until a student is 18 before he's out on the street. The reasoning behind this is economic and social.

"But an interesting problem has arisen in education during the past couple of years. Kids are asking, for example, 'Why should we learn to write? There is no need to write. No one writes anymore.' And in a way, they have a point. Very few people write or ... need to write," Smith said.

"They also say there is no need to read. And again, they have a point. A fellow in a General Motors assembly line doesn't need to read. He gets the news on television or radio. He does very little reading. Society has changed and so have the attitudes of students toward education."

Eight major Chicago corporations are spending a combined total of $10 million a year to teach beginning employees the basic skills of reading, writing, typing, speaking, grooming, shorthand and arithmetic.

The trend has triggered a raging debate among educators. Should diplomas be given to students who lack basic skills in reading, writing and arithmetic? Or should stringent measures be taken to require more from students in the future?

Some state and local education officials are not waiting around for the debate to be settled.

Albert A. Briggs, an elementary school superintendent in Chicago, declared that beginning this June, eighth graders in 19 elementary schools will be required to read at a sixth grade level to move on to high school.

Of 296 eighth graders currently headed for high school in the district, only 26 can read at a seventh grade level, he said.

The Philadelphia school district has set up an old-fashioned elementary school that demands daily homework, strict discipline, and emphasizes the three R's. Students will be required to meet minimum requirements before advancing to the next grade.

New York state's commissioner of education, Ewald B. Nyquist, says he will "very soon" propose a regulation that would make an eighth-or ninth-grade reading level mandatory for a high school diploma.

Nevada's state education board took the unique step of ordering a feasibility study on a two-diploma system for high schools. Diplomas would be issued after seniors pass a competency test, while students who fail the test would get a certificate indicating they attended a high school.

Can Air Replace Freon?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Can ordinary air be used both as a refrigerant to replace fluorocarbons such as Freon in refrigeration and air conditioning and as a source of energy for home heating?

A Maitland, Fla., engineering firm, Rovac Corp., believes it can. The firm, headed by Dr. Tom Edwards, has built automobile air conditioning systems using air as the refrigerant and currently has experimental and development contracts for them with General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, the U.S. Army and Air Force and with Fiat in Italy. An article in the trade magazine Air Conditioning & Refrigerating Business discussed Edwards' hope of reversing his air cycle in a heat pump to heat homes. Edwards told United Press International his aim in this direction is to develop a small, highly efficient unit that will extract heat from the air on cool, cloudy days to provide all the supplementary heat in a solar heated home.

So many people moved out of Fort Worth, Tex., during the "Panic of 1873" that a young lawyer wrote a newspaper saying the city was so dead he had seen a panther lying asleep and unmolested in the main street. This caused the fire department to adopt a panther cub as its mascot.

climbs to the stratosphere like that it becomes a scandal rather than an offer. He feels the money simply tarnishes the idea of a reunion and makes it much too commercial. McCartney believes that if the quartet were ever to reassemble again it will for a really good cause or for some appealing musical reason but not just for money. Has anybody thought to mention the Bicentennial?

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Why is publisher and TV talk show host William Buckley Jr. smiling? Perhaps because his recent novel, "Saving the Queen," which he dashed off in his spare time for the fun of it, has been topping "1876" for several weeks on the best-seller lists. The latter book, of course, was authored by the very literary Gore Vidal, a long time foe of Mr.

Shirley MacLaine's idea to do a movie about aviatrix Amelia Earhart? I remember her boy friend, Pete Hamill the writer, was collaborating with Shirley on the script. - G.E., Saint Louis, Mo.

A: Shirley's pressing on with this project and has raised about five million dollars for the film which will get started this summer. Only trouble is she may get scooped by a TV version of the Earhart story planned for this fall.

Q: Is it true that your mood can be influenced by the ionization of the air around you? - J.G., Burlington, Vt.

A: Scientists have been telling us for a long time that an abundance of negative ions in the air is refreshing and can lift the spirits. This is the kind of feeling you sense after a thunderstorm. Positive ions, on the other

Q: Is Diane von Furstenberg expected to marry film executive, Barry Diller? - G.A., Elko, Nev.

A: Diane, now running her own multi-million dollar dress designing business, is doing so well on her own she may prefer to remain independent. So don't hold your breath waiting for a wedding. And furthermore, we understand that her estranged husband, Prince Egon, met Diller on a plane to Los Angeles and the two have become friends. Somehow that doesn't seem to ad-

Prepare for Terror in Capital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Park Police are training with make-believe scenes of stark terror—a Washington Monument sniper, a Lincoln Memorial bomb scare—to prepare for threatened radical attacks in the nation's capital July 4.

Inspector Hugh Groves told UPI that putting his 23 shift commanders "in the pressure cooker" with the realistic taperecorded scripts is designed to find out who can stand the strain and how each will react as emergencies develop.

There are three scripts. Each deals with an incident on the wide, grassy mall that links the Lincoln Memorial with the Capitol—where police believe radicals may strike if they carry out a Weather Underground threat to "bring the fireworks" to Washington for the July 4 bicentennial celebration.

The Mall, 2½ miles long and laced with roads, is under Park Police jurisdiction. Among their worries is word that radicals intend to make "a roman candle" out of the 555-foot Washington Monument, which stands on the Mall.

"There is a sniper bound for the window at the top on the east side," a Park Police radio dispatcher's voice reports in one Washington Monument script.

The shift commander thinks fast: First, clear the vast lawn surrounding the huge Washington Monument and thronged with tourists at 2 p.m. on a warm day. Seated at a desk instead of in his command car, talking into a dummy microphone, he issues orders.

The dispatcher interrupts. "A man at 15th and Madison has been hit," comes the new report. Then, a moment later: "An officer near the monument has been hit by gunfire."

The sniper "controls" an area extending nearly 1,000 yards in all directions, scoring hits on motorists and pedestrians on even distant streets by spraying them with bullets from his automatic rifle.

In the end a Park Police Special Equipment and Tactics Teams arrives in an armored truck, climbs the monument's stairs and captures the sniper.

The commander faced with the hypothetical situation is under real pressure because he also knows Parks Police officials are listening. Later they will question every decision he makes.

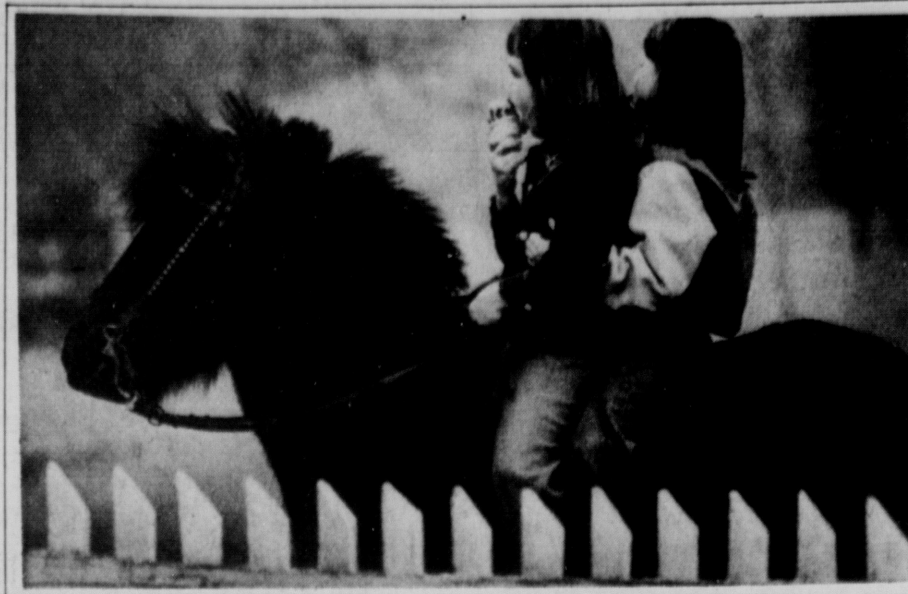

The scripts, drafted by Capt. Jack M. Sands, were made available to UPI. They include a bomb threat at the Lincoln Memorial, a sniper firing from the monument vantage point and the imprisonment of 90 hostages in the top gallery of the monument.

Each script last 15 minutes if played without interruption. But Sands can make them go on for hours by spacing the dispatcher reports to match realistic conditions.

The hostage incident hypothetically lasts 10 hours and ends with a negotiated surrender.

FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley said in congressional testimony two months ago terrorists might hit Washington during the nation's 200th birthday celebration. He cited a Weather Underground threat: "The rulers have set the time for the party; let us bring the fireworks."

Floating N-Plant Favored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff has decided there are no major environmental reasons to block construction of the world's first floating atomic power plant in the Atlantic Ocean off the New Jersey coast, an NRC spokesman said recently.

The staff's draft environmental impact statement appeared certain to draw heavy criticism. It must be submitted for comment to federal, state and local officials and is subject to revision before a final statement is issued.

The book-length draft statement was based on a two-year study of pioneering plans by the Public Service Electric and Gas Co. of Newark to put a floating nuclear power plant 2.8 miles out in the Atlantic just north of Atlantic City.

It said the risk of a lethal release of radioactivity through the air or water was "very low" and concluded there was little likelihood the tourist economy of the New Jersey shore would be damaged by the presence of the plant.

"The staff concludes that from an environmental impact point of view the plant should be constructed," the spokesman said.

In December, the NRC Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards issued a report tentatively approving the grant of a license to Offshore Power Systems, a Westinghouse subsidiary, to manufacture up to eight floating atomic power plants at Jacksonville, Fla.

The draft statement said experience in New York and Arkansas has shown there should be little or no dent in tourism caused by fear about the plant. It said the installation would greatly reduce East Coast reliance on foreign oil.

Breakwater and transmission line dredging will stir up 127 acres of sea floor, the statement said, creating potentially heavy siltation. It said burying the transmission lines will scar 43 acres of marsh and forest land, although much digging can be done in an existing road rather than in surrounding wetlands.

The NRC spokesman said the draft environmental statement was only "one small step" in the process of getting approval for the floating power plant, as was the reactor safeguards committee's preliminary report.

"We're a long way from approval," he said.

The $2 billion New Jersey plant, with two reactors in separate buildings, would be moored in 60 feet of water and protected with a breakwater to guard against ship collisions, high waves and winds.

Electrical transmission lines running from the plant to the shore would be placed in a large pipe on the ocean floor. To protect wetlands along the coast, the lines would be carried in an underground pipe approximately seven miles from the shoreline to a switching station.

Queen Opens Exhibit Of War

GREENWICH, England (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth is paying a good loser's tribute to the rebels who defeated her country in the American colonies 200 years ago.

The queen, with her husband, Prince Philip, was sailing downriver today in a borrowed launch to officially open a vast and colorful exhibition called "1776" — Britain's major contribution to the American Bicentennial celebrations. "1776" is a panorama of the War of Independence with exhibitions lent by some 165 museums, collections and individuals. About half of the lenders are American.

"The idea that the British should want to take a look at this celebration provoked both amusement and envy," said

Kenneth Pearson, the exhibition organizer. "We had come from London — the enemy. Americans found it quaint, amusing, droll, puzzling, eccentric — and they lent."

But the lenders' list is headed by Queen Elizabeth herself, releasing from the royal treasury many items personally associated with her ancestor, George III, who had the misfortune to be king when the Americans cut loose.

Pearson said he and his aides travelled "13,000 miles by car in the United States, Canada, France and Great Britain snapping up clues in countless museums, libraries and historical societies."

He came up with 595 items — a harvest including price-less one-of-a-kind historic documents and the most common and homespun items of the day.

Two Thirds of a Loaf Ends Strike

BEACON, N.Y. (UPI) — Inmates at the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminally Insane Tuesday voted to end an 11-day strike after learning two of their three major demands would be met.

According to authorities, the approximately 200 inmates who joined in the strike reached their decision after Superintendent Vito Ternullo told them Monday that three more psychiatrists would be hired, as they had demanded.

Ternullo reportedly also assured the prisoners the facility would look into revamping its parole system. Prisoners had complained that only 12 Mat-teawan inmates had received parole in the past several years.

The superintendent did not address the inmate's third issue — a lack of recreational and vocational programs, authorities said.

The strike began April 2, with some two-thirds of the prison's 300 inmates participating. Prisoners refused to leave the prison dayroom to go to meals or any scheduled activities.

Prison authorities said the inmates continued to refuse to leave the dayroom during the strike's duration — although they did receive some food there.

'Guilty' In Sale Of Cocaine

KINGSTON—The third of four men arrested in October 1974 after allegedly selling an estimated $100,000 worth of cocaine to undercover state police investigators at a Kingston-area motel pleaded guilty in Ulster County Court Monday to second degree criminal sale of a controlled substance.

Francis Piccoli, 28, of Kingston, represented by attorney Robert Ricken, pleaded guilty to the felony drug charge which carries a mandatory prison term with a minimum of six years to life.

Last week two others arrested in the case also entered guilty pleas. William Myrdycz, 20, of Hudson, pleaded guilty to second degree criminal sale of a controlled substance. Bruce Aho, 24 of Rosendale, pleaded guilty to third degree criminal sale of a controlled substance.

The fourth defendant, Ned Cecchini of North Miami, Fla., formerly of Poughkeepsie, is slated to stand trial at a later date.

Archeology Course Is Set at UCCC

STONE RIDGE—A credit-free course entitled "Archeology: Can You Dig It" will be offered at Ulster County Community College on 10 Saturday mornings beginning April 24.

Richard E. Gavitt of Cottekill, who teaches a basic course in archeology at the Overlook School in Saugerties, will teach the credit-free course at the Stone Ridge campus.

Techniques, theory and history of archeology will be covered in the course. Discussion will also involve the methodology of the dig, site and tool selection and handling and interpreting materials.

The registration deadline is April 16. Further information can be obtained by calling the Office of Continuing Education at UCCC.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF CHANGE IN ELECTRIC RATE SCHEDULE
On April 2, 1976 Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation filed with the Public Service Commission of the State of New York revisions to electric rate schedule, P.S.C. No. 14—Electricity to become effective May 12, 1976. Said revisions propose a change in the factor of adjustment of the Fuel Cost Adjustment Clause. Based on a recomputation for the twelve months ending December 31, 1975, the factor of adjustment decreases from 1.1260 to 1.1189.

COUNTY LEGISLATIVE BODY NOTICE OF HEARING ON AGRICULTURAL DISTRICT NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
Public Hearing to be held on Wednesday, April 28, 1976 at 8:00 P.M., on Proposed Agricultural District in the County of Ulster.

Notice is hereby given that a Public Hearing will be held by the County Legislature of Ulster County, State of New York, at the Town Hall, in the Town of Ulster, on the day of April 28, 1976, at 8:00 P.M., on said day upon a Proposed Agricultural District within the Towns of Ulster and Saugerties.

A description and map of the proposed Agricultural District, recommendations of the County Planning Board and Agricultural Districting and Advisory committee may be examined in the Office of the County Legislature.

The Ulster County Planning Board has reviewed this proposal for an agriculture district and finds no conflict with county plans. It is recommended that the southernmost detached parcel be eliminated since most of the land is not in agriculture. All parties in interest and citizens will be heard by the County Legislature at the Public Hearing to be held as aforesaid. Dated April 9, 1976

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, APRIL 15

Your birthday today: Whatever you say or subscribe to this year remains on the record. Broader responsibility and authority come naturally but demand sincerity and a steady pace. Material well-being builds slowly yet surely. Establish a separate reserve for emergencies. Today's natives are spiritually inclined, have unusual vocations and specialties.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Special use is coming for all your resources, so leave them safely invested. Add to savings. Prevailing conditions make it difficult for you to do work.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Complex exchanges accomplish nothing other than providing everyone with a chance to get to know each other. Gentle persuasion eases troubled relationships.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Expect delays in work and have other plans ready. Concentration on details pays off, as changes are harder to make later on. Keep life as simple as possible for those you love.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Creative enterprises deserve your full appraisal. Social activity causes you to spend too much if you accept all invitations. Be selective about people.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): After a tense morning, the day's events improve. Be tolerant with family members if they are in the mood to squabble. Take time to meditate. Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Somebody you like fails to keep an appointment. Give youngsters attention and discipline. Stay in your home territory.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use conventional methods when dealing with finances. Associates help you in business matters once they see you aren't going to plague them with personal problems.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your whole approach to living undergoes a subtle transformation as you develop more of your potential. Today is a visible turning point, and you are under less pressure.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Channel your impulses into steady work instead of secret maneuvers. Take the time to check minor items now, and you save yourself many corrections later.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Call on experts in the field to investigate conditions worrying you. Friends have many theories. Don't endorse their extremes or schemes. Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Since you're in the public eye more now than usual, whatever you do has significant effect. Make it positive! Don't try to upset anyone's convictions.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Work quietly where you are with available tools, and don't seek social and business opportunities. Mechanical equipment must be handled with care.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

LONELINESS: (Comment) When you're lonely, you cry and feel like dropping dead. I get real lonely a lot. Reading, watching television or lying down doesn't usually help. And I can't do anything that I could get discouraged with (homework, cooking, drawing, etc.). To make myself feel better, I do something active. I roller skate, bounce a ball, brush my hair, wash my face. This may not make me less lonely, but it sure makes me feel better! Try it!—13 in Pennsylvania

(A.) Movement is one of the best medicines there is. It tells us that we are alive, that we are not dead. You have discovered this very important fact, and I congratulate you. Maybe your letter will help other teen-agers to discover it.

THREE PROBLEMS: (Q.) I met Fred six months ago. At first we just liked being with each other, but now we're very serious and in love.

He says he loves me and I know I love him, but he already has a girl friend and he's the father of her 3-year-old son. They're not married, but he has stayed with her since the boy was born.

I know it's not right for us to be together but we are in love. What should we do? I am 18 and he is 22.—Troubled in Alabama

(A.) Fred has three problems—you, his other woman friend and his son. You can't solve the second and third problem for him, but you can solve the first by giving him up.

This will free him to work on his other two problems—a job he is avoiding now by associating with you.

Maybe without you as an excuse he will be able to work things out with his real "family." Marriage might be their answer. Suggest it to him and then get out of his way.

(Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

Senate Rejects Schwartz, 35-22

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The Senate, voting down a major gubernatorial appointment for the first time in memory, has rejected Gov. Hugh Carey's controversial nominee to head the state's prison watchdog agency.

The 35-22 vote Tuesday night against Herman Schwartz ran mostly along party lines in the Republican-dominated Senate.

The Democratic governor charged that those who voted against Schwartz as chairman of the Commission of Correction had shown a lack of commitment to prison reform.

Carey said the 44-year-old Buffalo law professor and attorney "has been made a scapegoat by those in our state whose commitment to prison reform goes no farther than rhetoric."

"Losing the services of Herman Schwartz will mean losing the services of a highly qualified individual, but it will not mean losing the fight to restore our jails and prisons to the proper condition," Carey said.

The governor said a search for a successor to Schwartz, "equally dedicated to the same high principles," would begin immediately.

Schwartz, named acting chairman last August, was attacked by the State Sheriffs Association and other law enforcement groups. He could not be reached for comment after the vote.

The lawmen were opposed to his hiring of several ex-inmates as prison inspectors and his proposal of new jail rules which they said were too liberal and expensive.

Schwartz defended the new rules as legally and morally necessary and said the ex-offenders were properly supervised and offered valuable insights to the commission.

Sources said Schwartz's confirmation ordeal had brought the commission's work to a near-standstill, with uncertainty over the outcome having paralyzed operations.

In a two-hour debate on the nomination, Sen. Ralph Marino of Syosset, the GOP chairman of the Senate Committee on Crime and Correction, charged that Schwartz was an "insensitive administrator" who did not seek input from the sheriffs. Marino was a driving force behind legislation last year which set up the strengthened, full-time commission.

"Herman Schwartz did it to himself," Marino said. "He was unbalanced in his thinking in favor of the inmates. He's a terrible administrator. He doesn't understand the job he's doing."

Sen. Emanuel Gold of Queens, the ranking Democrat on Marino's committee, criticized Marino for "really low character assassination" in some of his comments on Schwartz.

"If you want reform you have to do more than talk about it," Gold said. "For the first time in years, we've got a commission that's doing something."

Schwartz first gained wide notice outside the legal field as a member of the observers' committee which tried to negotiate a peaceful end to the 1971 Attica prison rebellion.

One of the two Republicans to vote for Schwartz was Sen. John Dunne of Garden City, who was also a member of the Attica panel. Sen. Roy Goodman of Manhattan was the other Republican.

Last month, Marino's committee deadlocked, 6-6, on the nomination. The Senate Finance Committee later voted to urge rejection by the full house.

Carey's other appointees to the three-member panel, Sullivan County Sheriff Joseph Wasser and Dorothy Wadsworth of Rochester, have faced little opposition and were expected to win easy Senate approval once the Schwartz controversy was settled.

The Vote

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The roll call of Tuesday's rejection, 35-22, by the state Senate of the confirmation of Herman Schwartz as chairman of the state Commission of Correction. One seat is vacant.

Republicans for confirmation: Dunne and Goodman.

Democrats for: Bartosiewicz, Beatty, Bellamy, Bernstein, Bloom, Bronston, Burstein, Galiber, Garcia, Gold, Halperin, Leichter, Lewis, McCall, Ohrenstein, Owens, Perry, Ruiz, Santucci and Winikow.

Republicans against: Anderson, Auer, Barclay, Caemmerer, Calandra, Conklin, Donovan, Eckert, Flynn, Giuffreda, Gordon, Hudson, Johnson, Knorr, Levy, Lombardi, Marchi, Marino, McFarland, Padavan, Paterson, Pisani, Present, Rolison, Schermerhorn, B.C. Smith, W.T. Smith, Stafford, Trunzo, Volker and Warder.

Democrats against: Gazzara, Griffin, Isabella and Nolan.

Excused: Mason (R) and Tauriello (D).

Senate Overrides Carey Ed Veto

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The Senate at 12:55 a.m. today voted overwhelmingly to override Gov. Hugh Carey's veto of a New York City education bill, handing the Democratic chief executive his second major setback in less than seven hours.

On Tuesday evening, the Senate had voted to reject Carey's nomination of Buffalo lawyer Herman Schwartz as chairman of the State Correction Commission, the first time in recent memory that a gubernatorial nominee had been turned down by the Senate.

The vote to override by 46 senators, six more than the minimum needed, marked the first time in 104 years that the legislature had passed a bill into law over a governor's veto.

Prosecution Rests Case

KINGSTON—After calling three witnesses and reading grand jury testimony by the defendants, the prosecution rested its case in Ulster County Court Tuesday in the trial of Ulster County Sheriff's deputies William Farrell and Bruce Quick.

The two deputies are on trial on charges of third degree assault for the alleged beating of Ulster County Jail inmate Marc Ryan of New York City last August.

Prosecution witnesses called were the victim, Ryan, and deputies Blake Kortright and Robert McCrindle.

Under direct examination by First Assistant District Attorney Michael Kavanagh on Tuesday, McCrindle testified that he saw the defendants beating Ryan.

Grand jury testimony by Farrell and Quick, in which each blamed the other for the beating of Ryan, was read to the jury.

The defense was slated to begin calling witnesses when the trial resumed at 1:30 a.m. today before County Judge Raymond J. Mino.

Fair Street Slasher Is Now Being Sought by Police

KINGSTON—City police are seeking a black male who attacked a Fair Street woman with a knife Tuesday night outside her residence. The woman, who police declined to identify, ran screaming from her attacker to a neighbor's house. She sustained a minor cut as the man slashed at her with the knife.

City detectives said the woman told them she left her house at 149 Fair Street at about 10 p.m. and returned about 10 minutes later to sit on her porch for a short time. She left the porch to get her dog, police were told, when a man with a towel over his face started coming toward her.

Screaming, the woman ran past the man, at which time he slashed at her, and fled to a neighbor's house, from which police were summoned. She sustained a slight cut in the chest, police said.

Checking the area, police found the knife and towel, but not the woman's assailant.

Detectives discovered that the woman's house had been broken into during the short time she was away from it. The burglar apparently heard the woman return and took a knife and towel from the house, which he used in the attack, police said. A small amount of cash was also reported taken.

A full description of the woman's attacker was not available. Investigation continued today.

Thwart Burglary

At about 6 p.m. Tuesday city police captured a 15-year-old juvenile who had broken into an office building at 41 John Street.

Police received a report of the burglary in progress at the building containing law offices and offices for the New York City Board of Water Supply at 5:52 p.m.

Checking inside the building, they found the juvenile hiding. He was turned over to the Juvenile Aid Bureau for processing.

Police Beat

Other Burglaries

Two burglaries sometime Monday night or early Tuesday are also under investigation by Kingston Police Department detectives.

A turntable and speakers valued at $363.83 were reported taken from the Thomas McDonald residence, 21 Park Street, sometime between 5:45 p.m. Monday and 12:45 a.m. Tuesday.

Extensive vandalism was reported at the Uniform Printing Supply warehouse at 132 Flatbush Avenue during a burglary sometime between 5 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. Several offices were ransacked at the warehouse, detectives said.

Cars Robbed

More than $800 worth of stereo equipment and other items were reported taken from cars parked in the Kingston Plaza Tuesday. City police received reports of four cars being entered sometime prior to 5 p.m.

Bedroom Blaze

Extensive fire damage was reported in a bedroom at the Neil Purdy residence, 245 Broadway, after a blaze broke out there early today.

City firemen were called to the scene at about 3:35 a.m. and found heavy smoke and flames in one area of the house.

The blaze was confined to the bedroom. It apparently started when a candle was overturned, firemen said. There were no injuries.

City Landfill Use Averts Garbage Crisis

KINGSTON — A garbage crisis in the City of Kingston was averted late Tuesday when officials gave private garbage haulers permission to truck their refuse to the city landfill at Kingston Point, but only on a temporary basis.

Garbage began piling up over the weekend outside county government buildings, city schools, Kingston Plaza and some individual stores. It was all precipitated by a temporary restraining order obtained by Town of Plattekill officials Friday banning the importation of refuse from out-of-town areas.

Private haulers — such as Hertel Enterprises and Spada Sanitation — were left with no place to truck the refuse, so they simply didn't collect it. City officials said the situation could have reached the "critical stage" Thursday or Friday had the garbage been allowed to accumulate.

An agreement was hammered out Tuesday afternoon at a meeting between the private haulers, Mayor Francis R. Koenig and the Board of Public Works. As a result, collections were resumed today and several truckloads of garbage were dumped at Kingston Point.

Permission to use the city landfill was granted only to those haulers who service city residents. "It was agreed that anyone who was using the Plattekill dump, and who was servicing the residents of the city, would be allowed to use the Kingston Point landfill on a temporary basis," said Woodrow Diehl, administrative assistant of the BPW. "but it was emphasized that this was only a temporary arrangement."

Diehl said city officials checked with the Dutchess County Health Department before agreeing to open Kingston Point to the private haulers. "We were talking about the possibility of a public health emergency," he said, "we agreed that it would be to the best advantage of the city in the long run to allow the haulers to use Kingston Point."

One obvious concern of city officials was the availability of space at Kingston Point. The site's "life expectancy" is limited, and the area will have to accommodate city trash until Kingston's new garbage collection system is implemented later this year.

Both Hertel and Spada were expected to dump between three and four truckloads of garbage at the landfill today, and then each will probably average about one truckload per day for the duration of the agreement.

"We're not talking about a lot of garbage," said Diehl, "but we're talking about more than we had going down there before."

The BPW will meet tonight with the private haulers to further discuss the arrangement. There is a possibility that some time limit may be imposed on the arrangement and that a fee may be established for each truckload of garbage that is dumped at the landfill.

Joseph Fiorello, owner of both Dutchess

Sanitation (which was transporting garbage from Dutchess County to the Plattekill landfill until Friday's restraining order was imposed) and Hertel Enterprises, said today that the city really had "no choice" in the matter. "The garbage was piling up and we had no place to take it," he said, "we realize this is only a temporary situation, but I don't know what is going to happen in the future."

The prospect of uncollected garbage piling up outside the Ulster County Office Building, the Court House, the Infirmary and the Jail didn't sit well with Peter J. Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature. He ordered a letter sent to Fiorello Tuesday stating that failure to collect the garbage would be considered a breach of Fiorello's contract with the county.

Fiorello said that he received the letter today and has turned it over to his attorney. He also said he felt he is being "harassed" by certain individuals, including Ulster County District Attorney Francis J. Vogt. "Our company," he said,

"will have to sue the Town of Plattekill and each individual associated with this harassment for damages."

But First Assistant District Attorney Michael Kavanagh pointed out Tuesday that the DA's office "did nothing more than enforce a town ordinance, which was valid on its face, until such time as the town could obtain its own attorney, which

it has done."

Fiorello must show cause on April 19 why a permanent restraining order barring dumping at the Plattekill landfill should not be issued. At least until then, the city landfill will have to suffice. If a permanent order is issued, a new crisis — affecting both the city and its overburdened landfill — could surface.

Emergency Lung Surgery for Patty

REDWOOD CITY, — Patty Hearst's right lung collapsed Tuesday night, and she had apparently successful surgery for the condition.

The prognosis for her recovery is listed as "good," but her hospitalization puts off a courtroom confrontation with the newspaper heiress and convicted bank robber's former captors and now critics, William and Emily Harris.

Deadly Fight With City Hall

BALTIMORE, Md. — Charles Hopkins had problems with the Baltimore city government, and police say he came to city hall to settle them with a gun.

When the gunfire was over Tuesday, a city councilman was dead with a bullet in his chest, three other civic workers were wounded and Hopkins had five police bullets in him.

'Dead' Gun Bill Revived

WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee has revived a gun control bill once thought dead for this session.

It voted 26 to 6 Tuesday to toughen federal gun control laws and ban both manufacture and importation of cheap, easily concealed handguns.

But when the measure reaches the House, opponents expect to offer amendments which would weaken its provisions substantially.

The bill approved by the panel was a substitute offered by Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., knocking out a ban on the sale of cheap handguns which was contained in the measure originally adopted by the subcommittee on crime.

Hostages Released

BENGHAZI—Three Filipino Moslem rebels released their 12 hostages in Libya today and were granted asylum in that country, Philippine Air Lines announced in Manila.

The rebels had threatened to blow up a commandeered jetliner in a their record-setting eight-day hijacking drama if their demands were not met.

The announcement by the PAL spokesman followed two days of negotiations between the gunmen and Libyan authorities during which Libya had turned down their pleas for asylum.

Domino Theory Seen

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger anticipates the so-called "domino theory" of Asia could apply to Western Europe if communists are voted into power in European elections.

"There could be a multiplier effect, yes," he told reporters when asked at the State Department Tuesday if, in a speech earlier in the day, he had intended to warn of a domino theory in Europe.

Kissinger testifies on foreign aid today in a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

Board of Elections 'Relieved'

NEW YORK — Federal court action has at least temporarily relieved the State Board of Elections of the responsibility of deciding whether to remove State Democratic Chairman Patrick J. Cunningham from his party posts.

Until it became clear Tuesday that a court order had been signed temporarily blocking the removal, lawyers for the board were of the opinion that Cunningham had forfeited his positions as Bronx County and state party chairman by refusing to sign a waiver of immunity Monday before a grand jury empaneled by special state prosecutor Maurice Nadjari.

Senate Passes Jobs Bill

WASHINGTON — The Senate has voted to pick a new veto fight with President Ford over jobs.

By 54 to 28 Tuesday it passed and sent to the House a bill to provide about $4 billion under expected rates of unemployment to create or preserve several hundred thousand jobs.

This would include:

— $1.1 billion to state and local governments for public works construction projects that could be started in 90 days. The exact amount would depend on the unemployment rate

— $1.4 billion to help state and local governments balance their budgets without having to lay off employees.

— $1.4 billion for water pollution control construction projects.

Legal Roadblock for Out-of-Town Refuse

KINGSTON—Ulster County Legislators Tuesday night set up a legal barricade against out-of-county refuse by a 26-1 margin.

When there were no speakers at the 7:30 p.m. public hearing on the county's local law number two of 1976, Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago quipped, "There was plenty to say on this last week."

The only negative vote cast on the garbage ban was by Eugene Perry (D-Kingston), who offered a cluster of reporters "no comment" several minutes later when the results had been completed.

Pressed, he responded, "I practice home rule. We've got zoning laws. Why should we tell people what to do? ... I was a member of a planning board for five years ... And then he added, "No comment."

Enforcement of the county trash ban has been questioned, as it contains a clause stating, "This local law shall not prohibit the continued operation of any refuse disposal areas within the County of Ulster which are being lawfully used in whole or in part on the effective date of this local law ... as long as less than 60 tons of trash per week are dumped."

The "crisis" in Plattekill at the town landfill site has been temporarily eased with Dutchess County once again opening up a spot near its airport for Poughkeepsie garbage contractor Joseph Fiorello's firm (Dutchess Sanitation) to bury its trash in bales.

According to a recent statement from Assistant County Attorney Francis Murray, this exception clause in the law would make it difficult to enforce the law on a daily basis, noting there is no precedent for counties taking such action, although there is for towns.

The state purpose of the law passed Tuesday is "to regulate the use of refuse disposal sites in Ulster County by eliminating disposal ... of refuse originating without the county, and thereby promote the longevity of existing disposal sites as well as any which might hereafter be developed within the county."

Violations are punishable by a fine of up to $300 per offense or six months in jail, or both, classified as a misdemeanor.

Since the exception clause states that the law "shall not prohibit" present lawful dumpers "on the effective date of this local law," and since the effective date of the law is stated as taking effect immediately, it would appear that with Fiorello's Dutchess Sanitation not presently dumping in Ulster it is effectively precluded from starting.

IT'S BEEN A DECADE... since the deuce was loose in the land. But back in circulation Tuesday went the new $2 bill as banks all over the country began filling requests for what looks like funny money. These "bettor's bucks" were among the first dispensed to eager customers by request at Kingston's Bankers Trust on Wall Street.

Three More Toss Hats in School Board Ring

KINGSTON — Three more candidates for two seats on Kingston Schools Consolidated Board of Education have announced their candidacy for five-year terms. Former Board President Joseph F. Feraca, present board member, Ronald J. Meyer and Harold Van Allen made their bids known today. Earlier, Len Cane of Kingston threw his hat in the ring for the Tuesday, May 4 election which will be held from noon to 9 p.m.

Feraca said he is relying on his past record of achievement as chairman of the personnel committee and president of the board. He is seeking unity among board members, saying he is "concerned and upset at the present bickering" since he feels the board member's interests should be solely in the education of the children, and maintaining or improving the quality of it.

Recognizing the problems at the high school and the immediate need to come to a final solution, Feraca doesn't feel that staggered sessions are the answer. Citing the fact that school population census figures in 1972 were inaccurate and that in 1979-80 the student enrollment will be only 2,700 instead of 3,100, he suggests that the board use the library property adjacent to the high school instead of building a new school. Feraca explained that by moving the school library to the present public library, eight classes would be freed. He would also utilize the ninth period, he said.

He said he would not support a new high school because the people have rejected it and because of the economic climate of the area and the high rate of unemployment. "I support the neighborhood school concept and will actively fight any attempts to move children from the schools they now attend," he said.

Meyer, an employee of American Telephone and Telegraph Company is a communications craftsman who "believes that quality education can be maintained by keeping neighborhood schools."

Meyer said he is seeking another term on the board because quality education, maintaining the neighborhood school concept, and providing equal programs for all our students are the main issues we must face up to in the months ahead."

Meyer claimed that as chairman of the communications committee of the board, he has held public information meetings, set up a telephone information line, and provided residents with direct access to district records.

"Because certain members of the board of education are unable or refuse to decide on a long range plan to solve the problems of overcrowding at Kingston High School, I presented a resolution calling for a referendum on the building of a new high school or some other option. It was defeated twice because certain irresponsible board members have clearly denied the public its democratic right in a free society," he said.

Meyer resides with his wife and three sons at 186 Downs Street.

Van Allen, of Hurley Heights, has submitted his petition for election because "of my life long interest in education."

Retired after 30 years with IBM as an engineer, he was elected to the Hurley School Board in the year the Kingston City Schools Consolidated.

He states that he has been asking questions of district residents as he gathers names for his petition, and has included questions on whether voters are in favor of a new high school; should the high school and M.J.M. Junior High be combined; and whether parents are satisfied with the education their children are receiving.

Van Allen has also compiled a list of what he considers to be "information that is needed before intelligent decisions can be made" on school property, population and taxes since 1960.

"My limited recent observations of the problems facing the Kingston area schools indicate a challenging assignment if the taxpayer is to be recognized as an important factor in the ultimate solution to our children's education."

Four of Van Allen's children have graduated from the school system during his 20 years as a Hurley resident.

Defensive Driving For Seniors

KINGSTON—Chapter 2039, American Association of Retired Persons, will offer a four-day defensive driving course in May.

The course will be conducted from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on May 5-6-12-13 at the Holiday Inn in Kingston, sponsored by AARP and the National Retired Teachers Association. John J. McCardle, Emma Aprea, Irene Tracy and Margaret McCardle will serve as instructors.

Nearly seven million persons have taken the course, also offered by governmental agencies business firms and schools to their driving personnel.

Board Sets Hearing

RED HOOK—The board of education and the administrative staff of Red Hook Central School district will hold a public hearing to discuss the proposed 1976-77 school budget at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, May 5.

Declining enrollments, declining equalization rates, reductions in state aid and ever-increasing operational costs were all considered in an effort to draft a proposal that would not be overwhelming in cost to local property taxpayers, officials said, noting that expenditures have been held to a minimum.

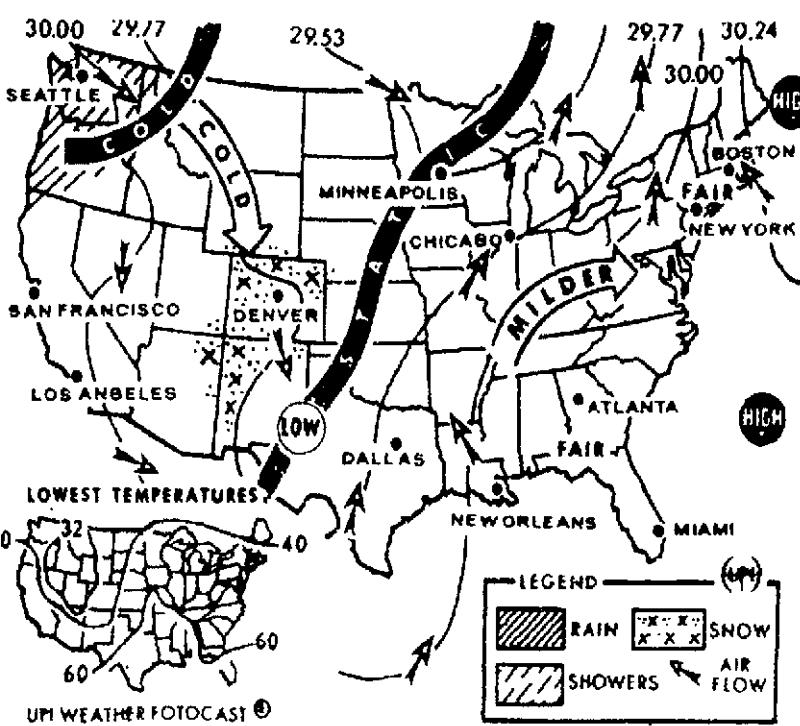

Staff reductions have been approved in administration, classroom teachers, school nurse teacher, music, guidance, secretarial, teacher aides, speech therapy and custodial areas.

Interscholastic sports will be limited to league contests except in sports where no league exists. In this case the number of contests will be limited.

Workshop Is Planned

KINGSTON—A weaving workshop has been scheduled for April 28 at George Washington School for anyone interested, with members of the Kingston City Schools Art Department cooperating with Phyllis Cohen of the Weaver's Store in Newton, Mass.

The workshop will initially deal with on-and-off the loom weaving techniques, but will be broadened to include other facets of fiber crafts. All materials will be provided. To register for the 7-10 p.m. class those interested may contact Ms. Bendazzi, director of art, Kingston High School.

For Period Ending 7 a.m., EST Thursday

During Wednesday night, showers and rain will be indicated in the Pacific Northwest, while snow is expected in the mid and lower Rockies. Clear to partly cloudy elsewhere. Silver Oxide Stolen

BENNINGTON, Vt. (UPI)—The apparent theft of more than $5,000 worth of silver oxide from the Union Carbide plant is under investigation by the FBI.

Robert Kent, chief FBI agent in Albany, N.Y., said Tuesday the company, located near the Massachusetts and New York borders, had reported some of the valuable chemical was missing from its manufacturing plant.

Under federal law, Kent said, if more than $5,000 is believed stolen the FBI can presume it may have been transported across state lines.

Meanwhile, plant manager Conrad Hoffman said an undetermined amount of silver oxide is missing and presumed stolen.

Hoffman said the chemical is used by the company to make alkaline batteries.

Bennington Police Chief William Fox said his office was notified of the missing substance March 30, but since then has not been asked by the company to investigate the case.

Hoffman said the chemical

The Blockage Being Looped

City officials inspect a portion of the Washington Avenue "loop" water main that was removed this week as part of the first stages of a major reconstruction and rehabilitation project conducted with Community Development funds. The repair project is intended to increase the flow capacity of the 16-inch water mains, in order to provide a more adequate water supply for domestic and commercial users and for fire fighting purposes. Excavation work will be performed on Clinton, Greenkill and Washington Avenues, with completion in early July. Public Works Complex to Swell

KINGSTON—The Kingston Common Council approved Tuesday night a $31,500 purchase of land to expand its Department of Public Works complex on Hasbrouck Avenue.

The vote was 11-2, with Donald Quick, D-Sixth Ward, and Philip DeCicco, D-Ninth Ward, opposed. Quick said: "Nobody knows how much this building will cost, when it will be built or where the money is coming from. We are buying a pig in a poke."

DeCicco said: "We passed a resolution against the Ulster County Legislature buying the Buick garage—now we are doing the same thing we told them not to do. We have property in urban renewal that we could get for almost nothing."

Majority Leader Peter Mancuso, D-12th Ward, noted that the city is now renting property to store equipment and that the two properties are adjacent to the department's present garage.

"It's better to buy there than to rent two or three other places," he said.

Minority Leader Titus Sims, R-13th Ward, said the department had outgrown the present buildings and that the city's new buses must be maintained. He said the decision to buy would save money in the long run.

Aldermen heard Clifford Sinsabaugh, D-10th Ward, criticize contractor James Berardi's work on two projects, one uptown on the Clinton Avenue extension, the other downtown in the Delaware-Murray-Hanratty area. Sinsabaugh said that Berardi had been negligent, that the city was being "ripped off," that storm drains installed by Berardi were only 50 per cent usable, and that engineers Brinnier and Larios were "amazed" when they inspected them.

Sinsabaugh said the engineers were readying a report for him and for James Connors, the urban renewal executive director.

Sinsabaugh also criticized conditions at the city landfill, saying: "The city now is doing nothing but polluting the Hudson River."

The Council heard the first reading of a resolution that would require all city employees to reside within the city limits. The measure would make exceptions for persons with "special skills" and would not apply to those now employed by the city. People leaving the city to live would forfeit their right to their jobs under the measure.

The council voted to buy three voting machines at $2,150 each from Automatic

Voting Machine Corp. without competitive bidding to standardize its equipment. Sinsabaugh noted that most polling places had trouble in the last election and called for company representatives to investigate and correct the conditions.

The Kingston City Laboratory had a so-so night before the Council. Its agreement to furnish lab services for Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals was extended through the remainder of 1976 but the Council turned down two requests for reimbursement for lab personnel to attend out-of-state conferences, both by 6-7 votes.

Clarence Raichle, D-First Ward, said it was a poor move. "If you don't want a city lab, just keep turning down these requests," he told fellow alderman. John Finch, D-Fifth Ward, said money for conference trips was in the budget and had been approved.

"It is inconsistent to vote 'yes' here and 'no' there," he said.

In other action, the Council: • Referred to committee a proposal that would provide for a meeting of applicants with the zoning board in executive session before public hearings are held on zoning change requests.

• Referred to committee a proposal by Joseph Markle, R-Third Ward, that would establish a block watchers crime prevention program. Markle said the idea had provided dramatic decreases in crime in nearby Newburgh at a time when national crime rates were going up.

• Heard Raichle call for a three-strand barbed wire fence on top of the animal enclosure at Forsyth Park to protect animals from vandals.

• Voted to hire two parking meter attendants at not more than $6,000 annually and give them peace officer powers.

New Signs of Welcome

KINGSTON—The City of Kingston has unveiled two new "welcome" signs that will be displayed at the major entrances to the city.

The signs were designed by John Geary of the Department of Public Works. George Carlson, a DPW carpenter and cabinet maker, handled the carpentry and joinery.

The materials necessary to construct the two signs were donated by the Civic Improvement Committee of the Kingston Lions Club. City officials are hoping that other service clubs will follow the lead of the Lions Club and donate materials for the construction of additional signs.

One sign will be erected at the city entrance on Washington Avenue at Taylor Street, near the Route 28 traffic circle. The other sign will be located at the Chandler Drive entrance to the Albany Avenue interchange. The DPW's goal is to construct and erect five additional signs that will be displayed at all prime entrances to the city.

Each sign measures 9½ feet tall and seven feet wide, with the display area five feet above ground level. The sign offers a "welcome" to city visitors and notes that Kingston was the first capital of New York State.

One sign was put up when the New York State Senate returned to Kingston recently for a session.

MATTHEW F. McHUGH
McHugh Here

Congressman Matthew F. McHugh (D-27) will speak to the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County members on the state of the economy at an April 23 breakfast meeting in the Colonnade Restaurant. Reservations can be made by the general public by contacting the chamber office by April 21, according to executive vice president Len Cane. The breakfast will begin at 7:45 a.m. and conclude at 9 a.m., with a question and answer session with Congressman McHugh scheduled.

O'Dwyer to Saugerties

KINGSTON—Paul O'Dwyer, Council President, City of New York the man who in 1972 won acquittal for peace activists Father Philip Berrigan and Sister Elizabeth McAlister at a spectacular trial in Harrisburg, Pa., has accepted an invitation to speak at the annual Spring dinner-dance sponsored by the Saugerties Democratic Club.

The May 1st event will take place in the Flamingo Restaurant and Bill Marchetti, club president, predicts a memorable evening. Members of this committee urge early reservations be made.

Paul O'Dwyer, born in County Mayo, Ireland, is the 11th child of rural schoolteachers. At the age of 18 he came to New York, attended Fordham University and St. John's Law School at night while working as a packer, elevator operator and cargo checker on the Brooklyn waterfront.

O'Dwyer's public life encompasses many dedicated years in service to the Democratic Party. In 1958 he joined with Eleanor Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman in forming the Committee for Democratic Voters. He worked closely with Mayor Wagner, President Kennedy, Arthur Goldberg and in 1968 emerged from the Democratic primary as candidate for United States Senate. He led the McCarthy contingent at the Chicago convention.

Through the years, O'Dwyer has represented a variety of trade unions and actively aided them in the troublesome 30's. A man of deep compassion and incredible drive, he has been a participant in the fight for Civil Rights, often volunteering his services as counsel.

Duane Withdraws

KINGSTON—Allan Duane announced his withdrawal as a candidate for the School Board of the Kingston Consolidated School District today.

A faculty member at Ulster County Community College, Duane said, "My concern was quality education in our primary and secondary school system. My fear was that not enough responsible persons were going to become candidates."

Duane pointed out, however, that "when Len Cane announced his candidacy for the School Board, I decided not to file my petitions and to give my entire support to his election."

"Mr. Cane's commitment to the well-being of our community has been proven on many fronts over the years. I am therefore urging all those who worked with me and shared my concern for the education of our children to give their full support to Len Cane in the upcoming May election," Duane concluded.

Patty's Lung Collapse Delays Facing HARRISES

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Patricia Hearst underwent surgery for a collapsed lung, forcing her to miss today's scheduled courtroom confrontation in Los Angeles with her former Symbionese Liberation Army captors.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress, convicted of bank robbery in San Francisco and given a temporary federal sentence of 35 years, was hospitalized Tuesday night with a collapsed right lung.

She was reported in stable condition at nearby Sequoia Hospital where she was under heavy security.

"She was moved comfortably and the prognosis is good," a spokesman at San Mateo County Jail said.

The spokesman said a doctor diagnosed her ailment as "tension pneumothorax" — a collapsed lung.

Her hospitalization canceled for the time being a meeting between Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris, her former captors and revolutionary comrades, now legal opponents and bitter critics.

Miss Hearst was to face the HARRISES today in a Los Angeles courtroom, a day after it was reported she had "turned state's evidence," and disclosed details of SLA crimes to the FBI — implicating the HARRISES.

Miss Hearst was to appear as a codefendant with the HARRISES to enter a plea to 11 state charges of kidnapping, robbery and assault. They have not seen each other since they were arrested seven months ago.

After her appearance in Los Angeles, Miss Hearst was to have been taken to San Diego

for 90 days of psychiatric examination before final sentence was imposed in San Francisco.

CBS news reported Tuesday, quoting "sources close to the case," that Miss Hearst, in an interview with FBI agents Monday, had given them her "own description of the SLA bank robbery near Sacramento last year in which a pregnant woman bystander was killed."

The report said Miss Hearst "named a half-dozen members of the robbery team, including, sources say, her old SLA companions William and Emily Harris."

Steven Soliah, with whom Miss Hearst was living when she was arrested, is on trial in Sacramento for the robbery.

Miss Hearst reportedly told the FBI who fired the fatal shot during the robbery, but said it was an accident.

One Man's Day of Rage At Baltimore City Hall

Hopkins, after guns were stilled.

(UPI)

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Charles Hopkins had had his problems with local government. Neighbors said he was evicted from his apartment and denied an application for a restaurant lease.

His rage apparently built. He was convicted earlier this month of ripping up a flag and setting it afire. City officials also said he disrupted a Board of Estimates budget meeting Monday.

Tuesday, police said, he went on a rampage and shot his way through two City Hall floors.

When it was over, authorities said, a city councilman lay dead, three other civic workers had been wounded and Hopkins himself had been felled by five police bullets.

A fourth official suffered an apparent heart attack several hours later.

Police said Hopkins, 35, of Baltimore, was hospitalized in critical condition under police guard.

Councilman Dominic Leone, a portly 50-year-old Baltimore tavern owner died of a bullet wound in the chest.

Councilman Carroll Fitzgerald, 41, and Kathleen Nolan, 39, Mayor William

Schaefer's secretary, both were reported in serious condition. Policeman Tom Gaither was listed in fair condition with a leg wound.

Council Vice President J. Joseph Curran, who apparently was shot at but not hit, complained of chest pains, several hours later and was hospitalized in serious condition.

Schaefer said he was eating lunch in his office when the gunman told his secretary he wanted to see the mayor, then shot her.

Police said he then raced down a flight of stairs to Fitzgerald's office, held a gun to his head and demanded to be taken to see the mayor.

The gunman turned into Leone's office and shot him on the way back to the seventh floor, where they were met by police at the office of Council President Walter Orlinsky.

"He's got a gun to my head," shouted Fitzgerald.

Police drew back. Then they heard a shot and rushed into Orlinsky's office to find Fitzgerald slumped over, bleeding.

Schaefer, after talking with police and visiting the hospitalized city officials, said it appeared the gunman had intended to kill him.

"That's what they told me," said Schaefer, tears in his eyes.

"Apparently, though, he was going to shoot everyone who was in his way."

Candidates Wooing Editors

By UPI

Jimmy Carter, Henry Jackson and Morris Udall converged on Washington today for a morning meeting with delegates to the American Society of Newspaper Editors. And guess who was speaking at lunch? Noncandidate Hubert Humphrey, that's who.

The Minnesota senator is never far from the political action these days. His role in the campaign was the subject of some of the political oratory Tuesday.

Carter, at a news conference in Atlanta where he was endorsed by a group of black leaders including Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., called Jackson a "stalking horse" for Humphrey in Pennsylvania.

"If I should win in Pennsylvania, which is certainly not a certainty, then I think that would eliminate a substantial part of the emphasis on Mr. Humphrey's noncandidacy," he said.

Both Carter and Udall attended a dinner Tuesday in Philadelphia sponsored by the Americans for Democratic Action and had a love feast with nothing but compliments for each other.

They agreed any Democrat could do a better job of running the country than the Ford administration.

Udall said the country owed Carter "a debt of gratitude" for showing a candidate from the South could garner such national popularity. Carter said he had "respect and admiration" for the Arizona congressman.

President Ford held his own meeting with the visiting editors in the White House's Rose Garden and told them he still thinks Humphrey and not Carter will be the Democratic candidate.

He had these other observations:

— He saw John Connally in his office earlier Tuesday, at his invitation, but had not offered him the vice presidency or any other federal job, and had not sought his endorsement for the Texas primary.

— He would not himself have used the words "ethnic purity," which have haunted Carter, but he agreed the government should not encroach on the "ethnic heritage" of established neighborhoods.

Asked why he thought challenger Ronald Reagan has drawn "almost half the vote" in primaries against him, Ford said, "I have a formidable opponent," but added: "We're doing very well in the delegates and that's where the ball game is won or lost."

Reagan once again was in Texas, for his second campaign trip in a little more than a week. He planned at least one more swing before the May 1 primary.

Soon after arriving in the state Tuesday, Reagan acknowledged the importance of the Texas primary but said that even if he loses it he will pursue the GOP nomination at the Kansas City convention.

"Texas is a very important state, of course, but it's not a stay-in, stay-out primary," he said. "I plan to remain in the race right to the convention in Kansas City."

George Wallace also was in Texas and said in Fort Worth all his Democratic opponents were "fine men" who have largely adopted the policies he has enunciated for years.

Our American Family:

Dear Editor:

Our American Family:

Some years ago the U.N. initiated the IDEA of a Universal Language - Espiranto. American English is the reality of that IDEA. Former President Nixon helped seed the IDEA of a One World Gov't. in his State of the World (instead of Union) Message. The World Bank seeds the IDEA of a World Standardized money system. America is NOT COLLAPSING!!!

The supra American conglomerates in compliance with the conglomerate industrialists of other nations have formulated a global national alliance where graft, gratis, offs is an ancient characteristic of bartering. Let's face it, until recently we were probably the most naive nation of people in the world. Remember the lull in America when Eisenhower admitted publicly that Gary Powers and the U-2 plane was a spy mission. Up until that point with our naiveness WE TOILED side by side and nurtured the most productive assembly lines which have made LUXURIES available within the price range of the American Working Family.

Technology came upon us so fast and sudden that these GOD given abilities have been programmed by systematized problematic minds lost in the recordings of victimized history books. This technology is being abused ONLY for the lack of a better way that MUST have commercial value. Is there a way? Of course there is, and all of us know it, but we choose to say that it is too naive.

Being above board and straight forward in all dealings might cause U.S. firms some foreign business sales at first (the start is gradual), but it WILL build a reputation for square shooting that will inspire RESPECT AND TRUST. The word throughout the world, in the long run, will be that for a SQUARE DEAL, buy American.

The decay of morals in America is contrived and has set the stage for anarchy in government. "Grab what you can, and let the next elected official clean up the mess", is the sign of the times. What is evolving is a cause reason to initiate stringent law enforcement to the point of a non-aware growing police state.

Right now, America is in need of a face lifting by artician instead of would-be craftsmen abusing our American Trust. The intricate details that create the overall family image have been cast aside. Modern defense - to protect us from the enemy is predominately within the realm of the transistor. The monies once necessary for mammoth defense machineries is no longer required. A close scrutiny of the Pentagon's budget and accounting records would reveal that by tightening their budget, their efficiency would actually increase as more and more projects are verified first, in the lab. The excess billions of dollars that are saved by not starting so many of the projects that are constantly junked - would be re-routed from the defense budget to a WPA endeavor. Money is not what we need!!!

I still have my trust in the reality of the AMERICAN HERITAGE PARTY - that has a solid realistic platform in '76.

It is about time that we stopped voting against candidates and accepting the lesser of the two evils.

Respectfully American,
PHILIP CURRIERI
Kingston

A Bicentennial Slate

Dear Editor:

I propose a Bicentennial slate for this presidential year. I dream of an election slate as follows:

Because President Ford is always awake and ready to use his Presidential Veto (36 times) on all the issues of concern to the U.S. citizens, I therefore nominate Rip Van Winkle for president: Mr. Winkle always sleeps and would do no damage to our economy or use his veto power.

For Vice President I propose Mr. Thieu, former dictator and savior of South Vietnam because of his able background and ability to accumulate 16 tons of gold, of course, taken from the American taxpayers.

For Cabinet members, I nominate all those war fighters and those active for world peace. For Director of the CIA, Alexander Solzhenitsyn of Russia, who was such an able man that he amassed and deposited $6 million in a Switzerland bank even before he was exiled from Russia by those red dictator communists.

For Director of the FBI I nominate Mickey Mouse or Donald Duck. Now, with such a patriotic list of candidates, we can relax and forget about all our troubles because all these able politicians will stop inflation and unemployment, and bring back our prosperity. Do you remember those WIN buttons of President Ford's? He was wrong then and he is wrong now.

Sincerely,
ANGELO DELEWIS
Modena

Congrats on Cartoon

Dear Editor:

I wish to congratulate your cartoon artist Landi for the cartoon on the School Board in the April 7, 1976 issue of your paper.

The answer to the problem is on page one of the April 7 issue in the article entitled "Expert says new H.S. Best, Not Only Way." It reports that Mr. William Haessig, director of Facilities Planning of the State Education department, recommends one high school for our district. This should be 2200 to 2400 pupil in size and would meet our needs for the next 50 years.

We already have a high school which if combined with the MJM Junior High has a capacity of 2615 students. Since the High School and the junior high schools are each three (3) years in length, the same capacity is needed for junior high. The M. Miller Junior High and the J.W. Bailey have a combined capacity of 2217.

This means that we do not need to build to satisfy the needs of our district on a long term basis. Any inconvenience in our schools is only a temporary thing and temporary measures should be used. The money saved by not building new buildings could be used to update and provide better facilities in our existing buildings.

I believe that the average citizen in our district understands I also expect all voters in the district will vote May 4, 1976 in the election for school board members.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Fred C. Hofbauer
Member of the School Board

Teachers Are Saddened

Dear Editor:

Letter sent to Ewald Nyquist, Commissioner of Education and Donald A. Lawson, president of Onetara Central School Board of Education:

As teachers at Onetara we are saddened by the existence of a situation that has forced the Board of Education to take action against the Superintendent of Schools. We have tried to honor Mr. Lawson's request not to keep the controversy alive with letters, but find that we can no longer keep our views to ourselves.

We want you to be aware of our support for the manner in which the hearings were conducted and for the restraint and good judgment displayed by each of you during that time. We appreciate the efforts made by the Board to correct what many of us believe to be an unhealthy atmosphere present in our district. We join with you in the hope that we will be able to unite once again in order to return to a positive course necessary for quality education.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Boyle, Judith A. Hague, Diane Pettit, Wesley A. Kissel, Mimi McGlaughlin, Lillian K. Gabriel, Kathleen Robinson, George A. DeFina, R. Rudolph Hellenschmidt, Susanne Cotter, Avis A. Gebert, Virginia A. Wright, Joyce A. Goodrich, JoAnn Traul, Helen L. Turck.

Open, Honest Dealing

Dear Editor:

Prejudice:— It has different categories - jealousy, bias, bigotry, gossip - it's a sign of human frailty. These traits of behavior are in most of us and should be dealt with open and honest in our feelings toward others, whether it's racial, religious, national, or any strata of society.

The antagonism survives even though we know the attitude is unreasonable because our institutions are meant to be bias free.

A child even knows that racism is unfair but when adults as well as children are injured psychologically, lose faith, disillusioned, when something goes wrong. This tendency builds up our pride and ego because we develop these prejudices as an outlet for our inner feelings. Therefore, we should reassess ourselves as we pick up attitudes from others in conversation based upon our experiences real or imagined.

Why build yourself up in opposing drives, desires, and taking our emotions out on others. There are all kinds of people in the world. We all can't be wealthy, or possess the charm of good luck it's a fact of life - so why the prejudices?

Sincerely yours,
EDWIN J. HIGBY
Kingston

You Should Be Used to It

Nicholas Von Hoffman

As TV Sees the News

WASHINGTON — Television news is a succession of deus ex machina bolts from the blue, and no news is more so than foreign news. The Peron family has come and gone in Argentina, and those handsome, authoritative voices on the tube haven't yet suggested how, how come or why. Election returns from Bangkok and Cuban expeditionary forces in the dark heart of Africa are reported to us rather like comets or cancer cures, something to be apprehended for the moment and forgotten.

From time to time, though, television news attempts to throw itself onto a continuing news story about some situation in another land that may last for weeks and months. Into that category we could put the English pound sterling and the Portuguese revolution where, you may recall, the seldom-if-ever-interviewed Communists were threatening to effect a Russian-backed coup d'etat for months until one day they vanished from our TV sets as though they had been vaporized.

Currently the longest-running, most baffling foreign news story concerns Lebanon. Night after night we have been told that "right-wing Phalangists" and "left-wing Moslems" are fighting terrible pitched battles for the Holiday Inn, the Sheraton, the Quality Court and the Marriott. We are shown pictures of skirmishes at the Golden Arches and ceasefires at the Burger Chef's. To listen to it, there is no way to tell the difference between what's going on in Beirut and a 1960's-style race riot in Cleveland, Ohio.

Lately, however, the names of one or two individuals have been added to the story. References are made to an old geezer, Suleimen somebody or other, who apparently is or was the president of the country, but who is in flight or hiding or under siege because some of those armed men whose pictures we see don't like him. Why don't they like him? Who are those armed men? What the hell is going on over there?

The best story is China. Even what has come to be routine China coverage is hilariously mystifying, consisting as it usually does of pictures of touring American politicians sitting with Mao Tse-tung, who either doesn't have or won't wear his dentures? We are shown defrocked President Jones or Senator Bilge-daddy, chairman of the powerful joint congressional committee on poultry reform, shaking hands with the revered if palsied old chairman who is slobbering drool on the American politician's wide lapels. The voice-over of the confident American correspondent informs us that Bilge-daddy was awakened at 4:30 a.m. to go to this surprise meeting but that it is a high honor.

That's the routine news. Then there are the upheavals. Behind Chancellor or Cronkite they show a slide of the map of China - always in red but only sometimes with hammer and sickle - and announce that the prime minister, veteran supreme party committee member Egg Foo Young, has been replaced and the acting prime minister is now Moo Shi Pork... It is explained that Egg Foo Young's fall is a slap in the face of the faction led by former prime minister and friend of the West, Chou En-lai, who is dead. By way of background information we are told Chou rose to power when the late Marshal Won Ton's plane was shot down while he was returning from Russia with a suitcase-sized atom bomb which he planned to use to seize Hankow.

Then we cut to the network's State Department expert who gives us the news that U.S. government Sinologists don't believe that the continuing battle between the defunct Chinese general and the dead prime minister will have any serious effect on our relations with Peking. Stay tuned to this channel for developments.

In Like Flynt

WASHINGTON — The House Ethics Committee, which was created eight years ago to investigate unethical Congressmen, has been roused from its torpor to hound not a Congressman but a newsmen.

As its first great investigation, the committee has hired a squad of ex-FBI agents to find out who leaked the House CIA report to newscaster Dan Schorr.

Now that the committee has been raised from the dead and has acquired the means to investigate somebody, we recently offered to provide the names of some bonafide Congressmen whose ethics need investigation.

If the committee is determined to investigate leaks, for example, we suggest it begin with House Ethics Chairman John Flynt, D-Ga., himself.

With his sleek, silver hair and stern, patrician face, he is the picture of a proper Congressman. But behind the imposing dignity, he is a sly, old veteran at leaking stories that will benefit himself.

We have established, for example, that he leaked confidential military information to reporters on June 10, 1973 to get publicity for himself and his views.

The Army provided Flynt, as a power on the military appropriations subcommittee, with a tightly-guarded reorganization plan 24 hours before it was supposed to be released. This contained news that a major headquarters would be located at Fort McPherson, Ga.

The Congressman was eager to be identified with the news. So he called two reporters into his inner office, closed the doors and passed out the confidential reorganization details. The subsequent story prominently featured Flynt's views.

An Army spokesman, without naming Flynt, told us the premature release was "improper."

On another occasion, the General Accounting Office conducted a confidential study of the Spewell Bluff dam for Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. He circulated the study, as a courtesy, to some of his colleagues. For them to release the information without his consent would be considered a serious ethical violation.

The governor of Georgia at the time, Jimmy Carter, discreetly cited some of the contents at a press conference. He was careful, however, not to release the text.

Reporters, catching the scent of a good story, sought the full text, but Talmadge would not release it. Yet Flynt, again in the secrecy of his office, handed over a Xeroxed copy of the confidential document to a reporter. The subsequent story, of course, featured Flynt's views.

This leak occurred, in case the committee is interested, on Oct. 2, 1973.

It might also be considered a violation of ethics for a Congressman to boost a company that is paying him a big rental fee. But in 1972, the Ford Motor Company paid him $12,500 to rent an empty field where they could store up to 30,000 new cars. The cars temporarily were barred from the market until they could be re-tested to determine whether they met antipollution standards.

Some months later, Flynt denounced the standards on the House floor, calling them "ridiculous in the extreme." He tried unsuccessfully to get Congress to relax the standards. When Flynt came up for reelection in 1974, company chairman Henry Ford II and his brother, Benson Ford, ponied up $200 apiece for the Congressman's campaign.

It is also considered an unethical practice for Congressmen to take free flights in corporate planes. We have learned that Flynt, nevertheless, calls upon Beech Aircraft and Atlanta Gas Light to provide him with air taxi service.

Beech does millions in defense business, which is funded by Flynt's subcommittee. The company was happy, therefore, to fly him in a sleek Beechcraft turbojet to St. Simon's island off the coast of Georgia for golfing and to the fabled Masters course in Augusta, Ga.

Once Flynt needed to return to Washington to chair an Ethics Committee meeting. One of the subjects discussed was unethical corporate courting of Congressmen. Yet believe it or not, Flynt wangled a free ride to the meeting in a corporate plane belonging to Atlanta Gas Light.

His corporate friends don't have jets with enough range to fly to Africa, where his daughter and her husband are stationed. So Flynt billed the taxpayers instead for a junket to Africa. There are those who might say this, too, is unethical.

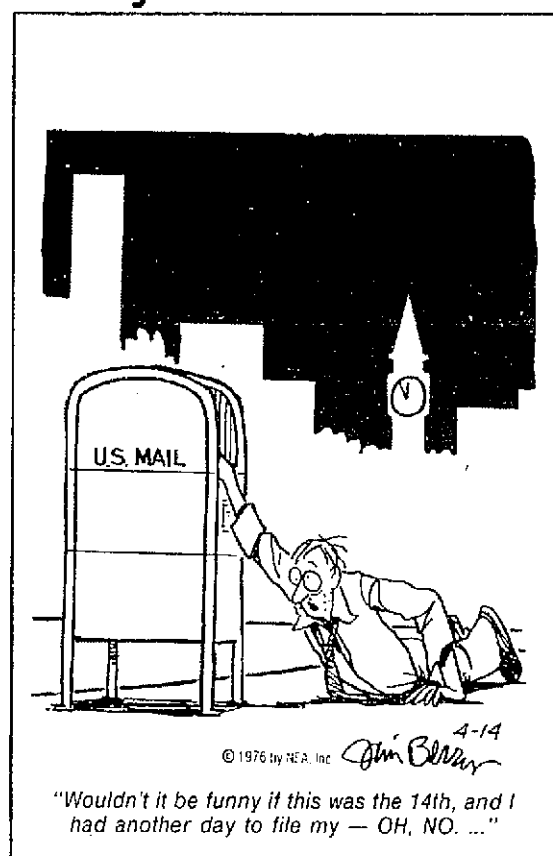

On other occasions, Flynt has turned up at the secluded Wye Island, Md., lodge of another defense contractor, Rockwell International, to shoot geese.

The members of the House Ethics Committee would do well to remember that an informed public can bring about a change in the ethical standards of Congress by mandating a change in its membership.

Footnote: Flynt talked to us fully about his activities. He did not "leak" the Army information, he said, but merely confirmed what the reporters had already learned. Our sources insist this is not true.

After Carter leaked information from the GAO report, Flynt told us: "I just thought I'd let it all hang out." He confirmed his rides on corporate aircraft but said he saw no conflict. Nor did he see anything wrong with his Ford Motor Company relationship. He got less rental, he said, than Ford had planned to pay for other land.

A Typical Welcome Back From Fun City

NEW YORK — Our plane lands at JFK International Airport. Vacation over, alas. Time is 4:52.

5:30 — Cleared by immigration and customs.

5:44 — Leave wife, three children, and mound of luggage in front of Arrivals Building. Go to bus stop for Long Term Parking Lot on outskirts of airport.

5:55 — Just as bus arrives I remember that car keys are in briefcase.

5:57 — Return to get keys. Suffer jeers of family, who beginning to shiver in thin vacation clothing.

6:05 — Take next bus to L.T.P. Lot.

6:25 — Car won't start. Open hood and discover that battery stolen. Feel deep depression.

6:32 — Report theft to policeman in patrol car. He says it happens all the time and could have been worse. Will write report later. Suggests I first get another battery.

6:37 — Call airport garage from parking lot toll booth. Lady at garage says car has to be towed. I protest that it would be easier and cheaper to take battery to car rather than vice-versa. Get permission to talk to higher authority.

6:39 — Higher authority agrees to bring battery to car if I (a) provide engine number, and (b) provide his employees with $57.50 for battery, service call, and labor. No choice so I say okay.

6:55 — Call garage with engine number after walking to car and back. Am told it will take half an hour to find, activate, and deliver battery.

7:05 — Try to figure out way to inform family that I have not flown coop with stewardess or been mugged. No way to communicate.

7:10 — Find policeman and suggest this good time to make out report. He would rather wait until replacement takes over at 7:30.

7:13 — Chat with man at toll booth whose phone I've been using. He says it happens all the time. It could have been worse.

7:32 — Two men show up in tow truck. Ride with them to stranded car. They say this kind of thing happens all the time and it could have been worse. Battery business booming.

7:36 — Men look under hood and say thieves didn't do much damage. Sometimes they rip out cables. Try to feel grateful.

7:56 — Battery installed. Car starts.

8:01 — Pay $26.00 to man at toll booth. Total cost of parking for 12 days, including battery, was $83.50. Could have parked in center of airport at $6.00 a day and had two steak dinners.

8:02 — New officer sitting in patrol car outside toll booth. Tell him about theft. He says it happens all the time and could have been worse.

I ask what does everyone mean, it could have been worse?

He says it's worse in farthest lot out. Kinney Parking, Inc., locks that one up at night and we can't patrol it. Out there thieves take tires, radios, tape decks, batteries, and would take engines if they weren't too heavy to get over fence.

Ask officer if he would mind making out report, for insurance purposes. He says he has six hours ahead and nothing better to do.

8:23 — Report completed. Take off for Arrivals Building.

8:35 — Shoot past Arrivals Building on wrong road. Have to circle airport again.

8:40 — Pick up frigid family, which had been anxiously consulting with police, airline and airport officials.

Family asks what happened. I say battery was stolen. It happens all the time. It could have been worse.

Chrome Supply Is Limited and Vital

Chrome! It's not the metal the Spaniards devastated the cultures of the Aztecs and Incas to bring back to Europe, but it happens to be an absolute necessity for every country in the West that depends on high technology for its freedom. That makes it more precious than gold or silver. To the average consumer, chrome is just something that is used to give his car a flashy appearance or to keep rust out of kitchenware. Not a precious metal at all. But to the guardians of a high technology society, chrome is the sine qua non that makes modern defense tick. It is the only available component that can be alloyed with other metals to withstand high temperatures under extreme stress.

There could be no space program without chrome. Nuclear submarines are dependent on it, missiles. Moreover, much of the communications structure of a modern society would fall to pieces without this metal. Politically, this puts the West in a terrible bind. Two-thirds of the available chrome ore comes from Rhodesia. There is chrome in Russia, in Turkey and in South Africa. The South African chrome is of poor quality and must be mixed with Rhodesian ore for good results. U.S. sources pestered out economically some time ago, and what is left in the ground in this country would require such high-cost exploitation that it would be cheaper to pay through the nose to the Russians and Turks for what they would be willing to sell. In the case of war involving Russia, we would get nothing. The Turks could be another problem: we have not exactly pleased them by our failure to back their aspirations against the Greeks in Cyprus.

Facing Inevitable

The point is that we are probably destined to be wholly dependent on the good will of whatever black government may succeed the minority white regime of Ian Smith in Rhodesia. With two million blacks against 250,000 whites, it is hardly likely that majority rule can be denied in Rhodesia forever. But Smith, a most tenuous character, may hang on longer than anyone now suspects. And in the meantime, we need chrome. The unemployment in Pennsylvania's stainless steel country would be unbearable in case we lost it. We would not be getting it directly from Rhodesia if it were not for the Byrd Amendment, which permits us to bring it into this country despite the UN sanctions against trading with the "illegal" Rhodesian government. Sen. Hubert Humphrey and others on the steering and membership committees of an organization called Members of Congress for Peace Through Law think we should scrap the Byrd Amendment in order to curry favor with Rhodesian blacks. But this would force us to use up our stockpile of chrome with no assurance that it might be replenished.

The Upper Hand

Another trouble with waiting without chrome to see who wins — and when — in Rhodesia is that if the Cubans, with the Soviets behind them, are to be the determining factor in any guerrilla overthrow of the Smith regime, we would be dependent on Moscow for every Trident submarine or B-1 bomber we intend to build. In the estimation of Sen. Harry Byrd Jr. it would be ridiculous to repeal his amendment as long as the time factors affecting Rhodesian change are so uncertain. If a truly neutralist black regime is to take over in Rhodesia, it would want to sell to us anyway. If a pro-Russian, pro-Cuban regime wins, it won't matter what we do about the current UN embargo. Meanwhile, there is a bare chance that the efforts of Zambia's President Kaunda and South Africa's Prime Minister Vorster to promote a "detente" between Ian Smith and his black neighbors can be resumed before guerrilla warfare gets out of hand.

The only sensible thing for us is to encourage detente here — and to load up with as much chrome as we can. Despite Hubert Humphrey, our stockpiles should be increased, not drawn down.

Area Briefs

Area Towns Eligible

KINGSTON—Jack A. Massaro, Ulster County Supervisor of the Farmers Home Administration, has announced that his office has been notified that the towns of Rochester, Marlboro, Plattekill and Shawangunk have been declared eligible for emergency loan assistance to farmers whose buildings sustained physical damage from a tornado or high winds on March 21.

To be eligible for the emergency loan assistance, the person seeking the loan must be an established farmer doing business prior to the emergency designation; he must seek the needed credit first through other lenders and must prove, in writing, that he is unable to obtain the needed assistance through local lenders, the farmer must be a U.S. citizen. In addition, the damage must be directly related to and have occurred during the period of the disaster resulting in the emergency loan authorization.

It was noted that if a loan is made the amount would only cover the difference between the actual replacement costs and the amount not reimbursed by insurance. The interest rate is five per cent.

Applications, which will be accepted through June 2, 1976, are available from the Farmers Home Administration, U.S.D.A. Ag Service Center, 880 Washington Avenue, Kingston.

Shrine Speaker

KINGSTON—State Sen. Richard E. Schermerhorn, R-4th Dist., will be guest speaker at the May 1 dedication of a Freedom Shrine at Marlboro High School.

The 3 p.m. ceremony is being sponsored by the Exchange Club of Highland. The shrine is co-sponsored by Kingston Trust Company as a Bicentennial grant.

Viehey-Sutton Post 124 will provide a color guard.

Highland High School Principal Paul Georgini, John O'Donnell and members of the board of education will accept the shrine from Lewis C. DiStasi of the Exchange Club.

A large representation of Marlboro citizens are encouraged to attend and join in the celebration of the dedication. The Freedom Shrine is a project exclusively of the National Exchange Clubs and consists of 28 laminated plaques containing duplicates of the great documents in American History. The Exchange Clubs install the plaques only in historic places so that students and citizens can read the thoughts and ideas significant in our history, enabling them to better participate in democracy.

Screening Tests

KINGSTON—Eligible area residents are being urged to register for free coronary screening tests to be given April 27-29 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Senate Gymnasium, Ulster County Community College, according to Brendon D. Alexander, president of the Mid-Hudson Chapter of the American Heart Association.

Persons between 18 and 65 who are not under a doctor's care are eligible. A number of pertinent tests will be administered and screeners will receive on-site professional counselling.

To take advantage of the free screening, persons must register in advance by calling 338-8553 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on April 20-22.

Volunteers are also needed to help with the program and should contact either the Junior League or the heart office directly.

Extra Session

KINGSTON—The Kingston City Schools will be open this Thursday for a half-day session.

The extra session is necessary due to the number of days that school was closed during the winter because of inclement weather.

The afternoon kindergarten will be picked up and will arrive at school at approximately 10:15 at which time the morning kindergarten classes will be dismissed.

Elementary schools will be dismissed at 11:30 and secondary schools at 12 noon.

Gourmet Leftovers

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

What to do with leftovers continues a major problem in most homes since buying meats for example in larger quantities usually is more economical. For ham lovers here is a solution. Dice up some leftover ham and combine it in a casserole with yams, croutons and canned Bartlett pears. And it doesn't hurt the palate a bit to discover the flavoring from sour cream and brown sugar either. Serve this casserole with a green vegetable or a salad.

- PEAR-HAM-YAM BAKE
(16 ounce) can Bartlett pears
2 cups diced cooked ham
2 cups diced cooked yams or sweet potatoes

- 1 cup herb seasoned croutons
1/2 cup diced celery
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups brown sugar
2 tablespoons soft butter
1 teaspoon grated orange peel

Drain pears, reserving one half cup syrup. Combine ham, yams, croutons, celery, onion, sour cream, reserved pear syrup, salt, pepper and melted butter. Place in buttered casserole. Bake in a 375 degree oven 20 minutes. Arrange pear halves cut side up on top. Combine brown sugar, soft butter and orange peel. Sprinkle over pears. Place under broiler to glaze pears. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

An Abbreviated Easter Feast

That Kitchen Bible The Joy of Cooking defines eternity as a ham and two people. If there will be less than a quorum at your Easter table, here's an abbreviated feast that will last less than an eternity.

Orange Cherry Ham
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Broccoli with Lemon Butter
Fresh Pears with Cheese

The sweet potatoes can be placed in the oven at the same time as the Orange Cherry Ham. Make Lemon Butter ahead to have on hand whenever you want a truly great flavor for everyday vegetables. Cream 1/2 cup butter. Add 1 teaspoon of fresh grated lemon peel and 1 tablespoon of fresh lemon juice, mixing well. Reshape into cube and refrigerate to harden. Cut into pats for serving.

For a quick but effective dinner centerpiece, use a low dish or basket. Place a candle in center and surround it with colorful oranges, lemons and your dessert pears. Looks great and you're all ready for dessert too!

Orange Cherry Ham
1 ham center slice, 1-1 1/2 inches thick (about 2 1/2 pounds)
1/2 cup cherry preserves

1 cup prepared mustard
2 California Arizona oranges, peeled, cut in cartwheels
Score and stud ham with cloves, place in shallow baking dish. Combine preserves and mustard, spoon over ham. Bake at 350 degrees F for 50 minutes. Arrange orange cartwheels over top. Bake 10 minutes longer or until oranges are heated. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Simmer Those Easter Eggs

Easter eggs should not be boiled!

That may come as news to some who are getting ready for the annual decorating carnival, but home economists at United States Stamping Company, manufacturers of ceramic on steel cookware point out that eggs should be simmered gently over low heat for about 20 minutes. After cooking pour off the hot water and fill the pan with cold water so that the shells will peel off easily when the eggs are ready to be eaten.

U. S. Stamping suggests a clever egg decorating idea. With a little construction paper, cotton and glue, it's easy to turn a decorated egg into an Easter Bunny.

Color the egg pale pink and fashion ears from pink construction paper. After cutting out the ears, crease them down the middle, spread glue on the back and apply small bits of cotton. Make eyes from fringed construction paper, a nose and mouth from bits of red paper and whiskers from thin strips of black paper.

White shell eggs are better for decorating but for any other purpose, shell color doesn't matter. Color of the shell is determined by the breed of the hen and does not affect the grade, nutritive value, flavor or cooking performance of the egg.

If you intend to eat the decorated eggs, U. S. Stamping's home economists say the eggs must be kept refrigerated. Use them as a table decoration once for no longer than two hours. Then they can still be eaten. Otherwise, just use the eggs as decorations and don't plan to eat them.

She's Helping Little Friends

ACCORD — Although Mrs. Milton H. Wagenfohr lives in Accord, part of her heart remains behind in a remote little Mexican village for in El Testera she has two young friends in whose lives she plays a big part. They are a young boy and girl, Rogelio and Blanca, whom she sponsors through Save the Children Federation, worldwide child help organization with headquarters in Westport, Conn.

After starting a long-distance friendship with them via correspondence, Mrs. Wagenfohr decided to pay their home a visit. Although both children were away at school, she recently met their families and toured their little village.

On every hand were physical evidences of the way in which her sponsorship funds were improving the environment not only for her two particular proteges, but for all the needy children of El Testera.

Among the self-help projects which Mrs. Wagenfohr and other sponsors' contributions are helping fund are a family vegetable garden project, new potable water supply, sewing classes for the girls and women, community center repairs, provisions of scholarships to promising students, and school supplies.

Funded in 1932, Save the Children Federation today sponsors 30,000 children and aids more than 100,000 through their families and communities in Appalachia, on American Indian reservations, Inner Cities and among Chicanos and Southern Blacks, and in many countries overseas. The Federation is a member of the International Union for Child Welfare. An individual, school or group interested in helping a child should write to SCF, Wilton Road, Dept. P, Westport Conn 06880.

Maundy Service

KINGSTON — On Maundy Thursday (April 15) at 9:30 a.m., all women of the Kingston area and the Reformed Church of the Classics of Ulster are invited to the Fair Street Church to observe its 15th annual "White Breakfast" sponsored by the Women's Guild for Christian Service.

The name "White" refers to a traditional liturgical color which associates Christ as the light of the world and is a reminder of the purity of his life which is sacrificed on behalf of the sons of mankind.

Garvey Heads Area Horsemen

NEWBURGH — A new, all-breed, horsemen's association specializing in all phases of trail riding has been organized with Bruce L. Garvey of Newburgh elected executive officer. Called Hudson Highlands Horsemen, the organization has an initial membership of 60 with a goal set at 100. Membership already includes horsemen covering a 75-mile radius from Long Island to Saugerties.

Also taking office as of April 1 were Robert VanKueren of New Paltz, first vice president, Ida Darrah of Wallkill, second vice president; Marge Gardner of Highland, executive secretary; Carol Staley of Kingston, recording secretary; Edward Garland of Cortlandt, finance officer; David Monelli of Newburgh, junior division chairman; Vincent Rhinardo of Highland, sergeant-at-arms. Elected directors are Elvin

Adams of Newburgh, Daniel Elkins of Kingston, Kathleen Henebery of Newburgh, Fred Kaufmann of Pleasant Valley, Salvatore Pisciotto of Gardiner, Gail Tremor of Highland, Jean Van Keuren of New Paltz and Kaaren Wooten of Highland.

The new organization, also known as "Triple H Field Cavalry," is determined to become one of the finest cavalry associations of its kind, to produce champion horses and horsemen, to become affiliated with all major trail riding associations, and to serve the public in whatever way possible. The group is seeking to be known as "the active club."

Hudson Highlands Horsemen will hold its first annual Spring Trail Ride Saturday, April 24. The ride will cover 25-30 miles through the scenic Shawangunk Mountains and the Lake Mohonk Area. Public is invited to participate at a very nominal fee. Lunch on the mountain top will be catered.

Details and information may be obtained through April 21 by writing: Hudson Highlands Horsemen, P.O. Box 2732, Newburgh, N.Y. 12550.

The April 21 membership meeting will be held at Spanish Butte Stables, Plattkill at 7:30 p.m. Prospective members are invited to attend.

Dear Abby

It's the Name

DEAR ABBY: Irving and I have been married for a little over a year. It's the second marriage for both of us.

First, I want it clearly understood that I had nothing to do with breaking up Irving's 21-year-old marriage. When I went to work for his company, his marriage was already turning sour even though he was still living at home for appearance's sake.

The problem: Irving's business is named after his ex-wife. She never was in this business and contributed nothing to its success. It has grown into a multimillion-dollar corporation, and Irving owns it all. (He manufactures a commercial product that bears his ex-wife's name, and I detest the sound of it!)

I have asked Irving to change the name of the company because it upsets me to hear it. He says I am asking him to do a most unreasonable thing because it would cost a fortune to change the name now, and he simply cannot do it.

Abby: I know he can do it if he really wants to. Am I wrong to insist on this one favor?

NUMBER TWO: DEAR NUMBER TWO: Being a business woman you should know how costly and impractical changing the name of a successfully established product would be. I suggest you go to work on changing your attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl with a very upsetting problem, but I can't tell anyone because they wouldn't believe me.

My dad comes into my bedroom during the night and plays with my body. I get so scared I don't know what to do. I was going to tell my mom, but she would be so hurt, and I don't know if she would even believe me.

My dad acts like nothing has happened the next day, and I can't even stand the sight of him anymore.

Don't tell me to talk to a counselor or a preacher. I wouldn't be able to look anybody in the face and talk about it.

Please tell me what to do. He doesn't use any precautions, and I am afraid I might get pregnant.

I can't give you my name because I don't want to cause any trouble and don't want to be disgraced.—CANT TALK IN OHIO

DEAR CANT: You must tell your mother at once! If she doesn't believe you, call the Child Protective Services unit of your County Welfare or Probation Department and tell them that Abby told you to call. Then tell them the whole story.

Your father is a very sick man and needs treatment. Please act at once and let me know immediately what happens. I care.

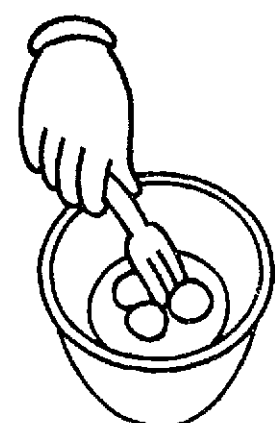

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school principal who has had it up to here with thoughtless parents who just pop in at their convenience for a special conference.

Will you please ask parents who want to discuss a problem concerning their child to phone for an appointment or write a note?

Other professionals do not accept walk-in conferences except in cases of emergency. Last week I had 16 walk-in meetings with parents! My time is scheduled, and I just can't see all these people who want to see me when it suits them.—HAD IT IN FULL-ERTON

DEAR HAD IT: You aren't the only one with this problem. Many teachers have complained, too. I hope this helps.

Frozen Puree Chocolate Cream

1/4 pound (1 stick) margarine
4 extra large eggs, separated
3/4 cup sugar
1/8 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons cocoa
1 tablespoon wine or brandy

Beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually beat in one-fourth cup sugar until stiff. Set aside.

Without washing beater, cream margarine and one-half cup sugar gradually. Beat in egg yolks, cocoa, cinnamon and wine, blending thoroughly. Fold in egg whites. Turn into 9-inch foil pan. If desired, sprinkle with macaroon crumbs or chopped nuts. Makes 8 servings. Freeze.

New Paltz Chapter Aiding Tom Dooley Heritage Drive

NEW PALTZ—Former An Lac Supporters will be assisting Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc. in New York under its new name, The New Paltz Chapter of Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc. Area supporters have held fund-raisers for four years to help feed and clothe children housed at the orphanage co-founded by Dr. Thomas A. Dooley III and Madame Vu Thi Ngai, directress. An Lac closed in April of 1975.

Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc. has funded An Lac and several other orphanages in South Vietnam. Now the emphasis of the organization is to raise funds for a hospital to be built as a living memorial to Dr. Dooley.

Dr. Dooley's short life was spent serving the people of Southeast Asia. In 1954 he was involved in the Passage to Freedom when the Geneva Conference allowed people to leave North Vietnam at the close of the Indochina War.

Dr. Dooley was in the Navy and chosen for the assignment because he was fluent in French but before the program was finished he was in complete charge of setting up facilities to handle the refugees and give them medical assistance. At the close of his introduction to a mass of humanity who, as one of his corpsmen put it, "ain't got it so good," Dr. Dooley decided he was to return to Southeast Asia and bring "19th Century medicine to a 15th Century area"—the upper reaches of Laos near the Chinese border.

He remained until his death in 1961 at the age of 34. The new hospital will not have all the trappings of an American hospital but it will be adequate and it will be what Dr. Dooley would have wanted local supporters indicate. Negotiations are progressing and a location will be made definite in a few months. The New Paltz Chapter of

Tom Dooley Heritage, Inc., is commencing a fund raising project for the hospital. Individuals of the group and friends will be selling luncheon napkins for 75 cents per package. There are 10 designs from which to choose and a package contains 32 napkins. Mrs. James DiDonna, 10 Clifton Terrace may be contacted about orders.

Honored Guests

KINGSTON—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Ahl of Kingston were guests of honor at a family dinner-party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Every Sunday, April 4.

The occasion marked their 45th wedding anniversary. The event was hosted by their daughters and sons-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Charles Geldersleeve of Poughkeepsie; Mr. and Mrs. William Burr of Middletown and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Every of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Ahl were married April 5, 1931 in St. Peter's Church, Kingston, by the Rev. John P. Newmann, now deceased. The Ahls have 12 grandchildren and one great grandchild. Mr. Ahl was employed by the U.S. Department of Highways prior to his retirement.

Preservation Players Goal

HENSONVILLE — Preservation of the Catskill Mountain tradition and history through theatre performance is one of the prime objectives of the Catskill Mountain Players. That aim received a boost last week with a money grant to players from the Erpf Catskill Cultural Center, Inc. at Arkville in the amount of $1,500. The Center made the grant in the interests of promoting the performing arts and preserving history. The funds will be used by the Players to plan and develop 12 summer roadshow performances. Last year the Players began making a name for themselves with innovative performances of Chekov, Neil Simon, Gilbert and Sullivan and modern dance in Windham.

To date, the Players have been funded only through theatre program advertisements and ticket sales, and the time they have devoted to rehearsals and productions has been donated.

The money grant from the Center will enable the Mountain Players to take their road show on tour through an area encompassing four counties of the Catskills on a farm truck that is being converted into a stage unit. Plans call for at least 12 weekend performances and contracts have already been inked for engagements at the German Alps Festival, Catskill Waterfront Festival and Delhi Summer Festival.

Any community organization interested in sponsoring the roadshow this summer should contact Catskill Mountain Players, Box 8, Hensonville, N.Y. 12439.

Roadshow pieces to be performed are being developed from material based on tall tales, folklore, true stories and reminiscences of the Catskills. The material reflects the culture and history of the region as acquired through audio and video records of "old timers" telling their stories. The Players also urge local writers, poets and musicians interested in contributing fictional and non-fictional material to contact them. Also needed are actors, dancers, technicians, writers and people to collect resource material.

In addition to roadshow performances, the Players will involve themselves in the education process through an Oral History workshop on a regional basis throughout the Catskills. Those interested in exploring the cultural heritage of the mountains in the informal atmosphere of the workshop through local community participation can also contact the Players.

Additionally, the Players are developing a Children's Theatre Workshop for this summer to introduce nine-to-12-year-olds to the "Arts and Artists" of the Catskills.

Young people will also be introduced to silkscreening, pottery, dance, video and theatre expression, and interested parents are invited to write or call the Players at the address noted above.

The brilliant, witty and inspiring musical, "1776" will be staged at the Rondout Valley High School on May 1st at 8 p.m. by the Continental Theatre Company of New York. Billed as an all-star, all-American hit, it is a rousing celebration of the shaping of America. The events that occurred in Independence Hall during the hot summer of 1776 are presented in a glowing musical re-telling the story of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Tickets are now on sale at the District office and donation is $4.50.

Liza Will Be Special Guest

Liza Minnelli with special guest star, Marvin Hamlisch, will be presented by the Westchester Premier Theatre April 18-April 25.

One of the most polished and accomplished multi-talented stars in show business, Liza Minnelli has become the darling of critics and public alike. On Broadway, motion pictures, television, nightclubs and concerts. Since her Broadway debut at the age of 9 in "Flora, the Red Menace" she has "collected" various awards on her way to stardom. She topped the Academy Award for Best Actress and British Oscar for Best Actress in 1972, among others.

Liza has recently completed a movie, "A Matter of Time," in Rome, starring Ingrid Bergman and Charles Boyer to be released through American International Pictures.

Marvin Hamlisch, the 31 year old composer who is on his way to sweeping every musical award in the entertainment industry, began his musical career with a considerable achievement—at the age of seven, he became the youngest student admitted to Juilliard School of Music. His first hit record, written at age 16, was recorded by Lesley Gore. Since that time, he has received numerous nominations and awards. Hamlisch has topped three Academy Awards for: Best Original Song, Best Original Dramatic Score (The Way We Were) and Best Scoring (Adaptation of Scott Joplin's ragtime music for the score of the Sting). This year Hamlisch returned to his first creative love, the theatre, and "A Chorus Line" was the result. The show won the Drama Critics' Circle Award as "Best Musical of 1975."

Ticket information may be obtained by contacting (914) 332-0500.

Cragmoor Celebration

CRAGMOOR — The Cragmoor Bicentennial Arts Celebration, July 8 to 12, will not only benefit the Cragmoor Free Library but offer the public a concert of music by American composers and an art exhibit.

The exhibit will include the works of E.L. Henry, Charles C. Curran, George Inness Jr., Edward Gay, Helen Turner, Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, J.G. Brown, Edmund Greacen, Carroll Brown and Arthur I. Keller will be included.

These artists were attracted to the hamlet atop the Shawangunk Mountains in Southern Ulster County because it afforded unsurpassed views of the Catskill range and surrounding valleys.

The American theatre will be represented by songs from the stage with a Bicentennial theme.

PBS Benefit

SCHENECTADY — The area's three commercial television stations, WRGB/6, WTEN/10, and WAST/13 have agreed to simulcast the WMHT/17 "TV Auction Game" on Monday, April 26 from 7:30 until 8 p.m.

The "TV Auction Game" is WMHT/17's largest yearly fund raising event in which more than 800 volunteers are working to raise $200,000 or more for the public broadcasting station.

Proceeds will be used to help pay the operating expenses of the public broadcasting station.

Music A Necessity

NEW PALTZ — "Music was and always will be a part of my life, like fresh air, it's a necessity," says Eda Fagon, musical and choral director of Ninety Miles Off Broadway.

The community theatre group will present "Of Thee I Sing" on May 6, 7 and 8 with curtains at 8:30 p.m. and a 2 p.m. matinee on May 9 in the New Paltz High School.

Regarded as a gifted woman in her field, Ms. Fagon has conducted, coached, composed and sung with the Chicago Opera and New York Philharmonic. For the New Paltz Production this New Paltz resident of five years, will arrange the musical and choral numbers in the spring production of the Gershwin favorite.

Ms. Fagon says Gershwin's music "is one of my loves and I hope to reproduce those famous tunes with utmost accuracy in the upcoming musical. I saw the original production years back when it was on Broadway and this should help greatly in this present production."

Aside from her conducting responsibilities with Ninety Miles, Ms. Fagon has been also giving performances of her own.

Box office for "Of Thee I Sing" opens April 28 at 107 Main Street.

The ballet "Revelations," considered Alvin Ailey's masterpiece, will be the closing work on a program of the Alvin Ailey Repertory Workshop when it appears at the Poughkeepsie High School on April 24 at 8 p.m. Presented by the Performing Arts Festival, sponsored by the Hudson Valley Philharmonic and the Poughkeepsie Ballet Theatre, the work has become the signature piece of the Alvin Ailey company. The dance, using music of the Black tradition including spirituals, ring shows, and song sermons, builds to a finale in which the dancers, and most often the audience as well, burst into a joyous affirmation of hope. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Computer Art Vassar Topic

POUGHKEEPSIE—Thomas F. Banchoff will speak on "Computer Graphics, Art, and the Fourth Dimension" at Vassar College on Wednesday, April 21 at 8 p.m. Dr. Banchoff is a professor of mathematics at Brown University.

The lecture and computer graphics film presentation will be held in the main lounge of the College Center. The program is sponsored by the Department of Computer Science and is open to the public without charge.

A graduate of Notre Dame, the speaker received his Ph.D. in mathematics from the University of California at Berkeley in 1964. He was a Benjamin Pierce Lecturer in Mathematics at Harvard before going to Brown. His research interests are in the fields of differential and piecewise linear geometry.

Under a grant from the National Science Foundation, Dr. Banchoff and Charles Strauss of the computer science department at Brown began making computer graphic films approximately six years ago. The films, which Dr. Banchoff will present at Vassar, attempt to provide a better insight into the fourth dimension. This is done by considering all possible projections of objects in four dimensional space into three dimensional spaces.

Artist for April

ULSTER—Laura Schrader of Red Hook has turned painting into a successful career and this month is the featured artist in the Town of Ulster Library.

Her works have been exhibited at the Washington Square Outdoor Art Show, the Washington, Conn. Art Gallery, Crespi Gallery in New York City and the traveling art show of the International Art Exchange. She has won a number of first and second awards and has had paintings in shows throughout the Hudson Valley.

The artist works mostly in water color and her favorite subject—landscapes.

The Easter Bunny, with Diane Merrill as his authorized impersonator, had a busy day in the Kingston Plaza, giving candy to kids, and helping them have fun on the various kiddie rides provided by the Kingston Plaza Merchants Association. In addition, 30 families were winners in the association-sponsored ham giveaway. The Bunny's activities were only one of several such promotional events the association has planned as the Plaza celebrates its 12th birthday. (Freeman photo)

County Realtor Board To Hear Prof. Nadel

Nadel

KINGSTON — "Economic Trends and Their Affect on Real Property" will be the subject of Prof. Edward P. Nadel when he addresses the Ulster County Board of Realtors at their annual Realtor Week luncheon on Friday, April 23 at the Colonnade Restaurant in the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Presently serving as professor of economics at the Ulster County Community College, Nadel is highly qualified in the subject he has chosen having served Goddard College in Vermont and the University of Maine before coming to UCCC. Nadel has conducted research and presented papers at York University in Canada on two occasions and has written for several publications. He has a B.A. from Queens College and an M.A. from Northwestern University. He was commencement speaker at UCCC in 1974 and on several occasions during the past three years has lectured to many groups on "The Economic Revolution of the 1970s."

He resides with his wife and three children in Stone Ridge. A special feature of the luncheon will be the awarding of a plaque to a local board member chosen as "Realtor of the Year."

The public is invited to the luncheon and tickets and reservations can be obtained from the Ulster County Board of Realtors office in the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Ulster Savings Assets Exceed $150 Million

KINGSTON—Total assets of the Ulster Savings Bank exceeded the $150 million mark on April 5, for the first time ever. It was announced by Howard C. St. John, president. And it wasn't just a temporary breakthrough, according to St. John, who indicated, "When we passed — the $150 million level it was by a very comfortable margin of $189,000."

All of this increase was accomplished through natural growth, including four branch offices opened over the past five years. None of the growth was accomplished by merger. Ulster Savings Bank opened its first branch in New Paltz in 1971 and subsequently opened two branches in Poughkeepsie and one in Middletown.

As of April 1, the Ulster Savings Bank had $139 million in real estate mortgages, spread mostly between Ulster, Dutchess, Orange, Sullivan and Rockland counties. As a result of the Ulster Savings Bank's recently announced new mortgage policy, which includes 30-year mortgages with over 90 per cent financing in some cases, mortgage activity has increased to volumes not experienced since 1973.

St. John said he sincerely hopes that this new mortgage policy will stimulate home building and home buying in the Mid-Hudson area, thereby providing economic assistance to the overall region. Mr. St. John also stated, "About three-fourths of a million dollars in new residential mortgages were approved this past week by Ulster Savings Bank and we are pleased to be a leader in servicing the mortgage and other financial needs of our community."

New Area Shop to Serve SCUBA Needs

TOWN OF ULSTER—One of the fastest growing sports today is skin and SCUBA diving. This is true partly because of man's growing need to explore the seas, which has caused a new interest in our underwater world. The Underwater Shoppe, Boice's Lane, has just opened its doors to offer its services to area skin and SCUBA divers and people who would like to dive. The shoppe offers a complete program of skin and scuba diving courses leading to National Certification. This is required by law to dive in some states. In addition to instruction, the Shoppe offers a complete line of high quality diving equipment and service and backs both to the hilt. Professional quality mask, fins and snorkels that fit the individual; stock and custom made wet suits; diving gear and accessories and, of course, an air station that offers filtered compressed air for tank refills.

As part of the instruction program, equipment is supplied for the use of the students. This equipment is also available for rental by nationally certified divers. Another service offered to the community is underwater inspection and light salvage work by trained divers. This is primarily of interest to large boat owners and people who wish something retrieved from below.

Many divers like to take their vacations in the Caribbean or other areas where diving is super. The Shoppe offers a travel service whereby divers may join "The Underwater Adventurers Association" and qualify for group fares and special package rates.

Billy Cobham's Renaissance: The Thunder of Good Times

By Ray Townley

PHILADELPHIA—He had to humble himself and share top billing in his own group with a new addition — an old Mother at that — but Billy Cobham is back on his feet three hard years after leaving the Mahavishnu Orchestra. With Mahavishnu he'd merged as a Thor of contemporary music, a formidable drummer considered among the best in progressive jazz. Then he decided to make it on his own. It didn't work out very well.

LOST CONTROL
"I had poor management and received poor advice," he says. He is tired after a high-powered set at the Tower Theatre, and his voice is surprisingly tender. For three years, he says, his reputation and his five Atlantic albums weren't enough to get him jobs in key markets like Chicago, Detroit, Atlanta and New Orleans. "I was strictly a regional act. There were simply a lot of forces out of my control that hurt me."

Cobham felt that Atlantic had not promoted him properly, especially in light of the success he'd had with the "Spectrum" album. He'd broken his ties with Sid Bernstein, who had been his agent for personal appearances. Last summer, the roof had caved in on him during a disastrous European tour.

"Dates started to fall out immediately," Billy recalls. "I never even got to meet the promoter. At that point I broke off with the Bernstein office. The tour grossed $60,000 for the band, but ended up costing $150,000. My whole personal life started to collapse. I got disillusioned with music. I didn't pick up my drumsticks from the middle of July to December 10th, when I did a record date for Quincy Jones. I didn't even keep a record player in the house."

TURNING IT AROUND
Bernstein admitted that he had trouble representing a non-vocal act and that, as Cobham's manager for personal appearances only, he could not get him the hit album required to back his tours. Cobham's new management, Mark Meyerson and Herb Cohen, has convinced Atlantic to support "A Funky Thide of Sings" and the just released "Life and Times." A divorce and a move to California have helped to straighten out his personal life.

Most important to Cobham's renaissance is his newest musical aggregation, the tightly streamlined but

clumsily named Billy Cobham-George Duke Band featuring Alphonso Johnson and John Scofield. It features ex-Mother of Invention Duke (also known as Dawilli Gongu)

on eight different keyboards (including Motron phasers and space echoes), recently departed Weather Report member Johnson on bass and Scofield on lead guitar.

Cobham holds court behind a battery of drums and cymbals that requires 19 mikes, two direct lines, a Moog drum and foot pedals to phase and equalize every percussion sound.

Duke, who spent three-and-a-half years with the Mothers and has played with Cannonball Adderley, Quincy Jones, Harry "Sweets" Edison and Artie, is the most publicized of Cobham's new companions. He just recorded his fourth album, "Liberated Fantasy."

"At first I wanted to use George as a side man," Cobham says. "Because I felt strongly that I had built up a name for myself. From past experiences with bands like Dreams, I learned that cooperative bands do not make it. However, Herb Cohen, who is also managing George, felt he was worth more than that. Finally Doug Rauch, an unsung hero on the bass (he played on 'Life and Times' but was replaced by Johnson for the tour), convinced me that George was worth a percentage. I decided he was right, went to George, humbled myself and came to an agreement."

TIE PROOF
The wisdom of Cobham's decision was proven at the Philly concert before an appreciative SRO house of 3,100. Following a set by Ronnie Laws, Cobham set the audience to screaming with the mere sight of his gigantic drum kit being rolled onto center stage.

Back on his feet after three years

Together for only four weeks, the quartet showed magnificent rapport. The trail, youthful Johnson laid down thick, evenly spaced bass anchors. Scofield and Duke traded urgent melody lines that lifted it toward the lightness of the old Mahavishnu Orchestra and Return to Forever. Cobham pushed the band with his constant thundering tom rolls and excellently controlled cymbal crashes.

If there was a key figure, though, it was Duke. He used his keyboards for highly visual coloring and managed to bend notes on the ARP so that they took on a weeping, near-human tone. In mid-show, he took command for a mini-set that included Frank Zappa's "Echidna Arf," solo playing over a pre-recorded opera called "Tzina" and then "Uncle Remus," a talking blues. It was more than just another jazz-rock supersession.

Afterward, Cobham is pleased enough to prefer his new band to a rumored "supergroup" situation with Stanley Clarke and John McLaughlin.

"I made a strategic move in joining forces with very strong people like Herb Cohen and Mark Meyerson, and with George Alphonso and John Scofield. If you don't have elements that are going to save, 'OK, we're going to do it for you, it's not going to happen'."

The Spanking New Yankee Stadium

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — You should look so good as Bob Shawkey when you're 85. And be so happy and full of life.

He can't wait for tomorrow.

That's when he throws out the first ball to get the New York Yankees underway in their home opener with the Minnesota Twins. Shawkey made a special trip from his home in Syracuse for the reopening of Yankee Stadium, closed two years while being remodeled, refurbished, reev-crithingled, for somewhere between $86 million and $100 million.

He isn't nervous at all. No reason for him to be. He pitched for the Yankees the day Yankee Stadium originally was opened on April 18, 1923 and he wasn't nervous then when there were 74,000 on hand, so he certainly isn't going to break out in a cold sweat now when he's merely a spectator and the place accommodates only 54,000.

"Maybe the reason I wasn't nervous the day I pitched the opener in 1923 was because I watched Yankee Stadium being built," says Shawkey. "The most amazing thing about it is there was steel all over the ground when we went to training camp that spring, but when we got back, everything was all finished. The field looked smooth as a lawn. It was beautiful. We had played in the Polo Grounds before and we had some big crowds there, but never anything like the one we had the day Yankee Stadium opened."

"Years later," Shawkey laughs, "some of the boys in the league asked me, 'how did you have nerve to pitch before 74,000?' I told 'em all the same thing, you feel a little anxious at first, but after you get out there and start pitching, you forget about the crowd and about everything else and it's just another ball game."

Bob Shawkey came to the Yankees in the middle of 1915 from the Philadelphia A's, being one of those players sold by Connie Mack. Shawkey wasn't a run-of-the-mill pitcher. He had a fine fast ball, good control and a sharp mind, so sharp, in fact, the Yankees made him their manager in 1930.

Before that, though, he won 24 games for them in 1916. He also was a 20-game winner in 1918, 1919 and 1922. So he was manager Miller Huggins' natural choice to pitch the 1923 home opener against Howard Ehmke of the Boston Red Sox on the first day they opened Yankee Stadium.

"We saw that beautiful new stadium and it gave everybody more ambition to hustle," Shawkey says. "You could still smell the fresh paint. Anyway, the game with the Red Sox started and we went along there for a few innings with neither of us scoring. Along about the fourth inning, we got two on and the Babe came up and hit it into the bleachers for three runs."

Fittingly enough, Babe Ruth was the first man ever to hit a home run in Yankee Stadium and the blow carried Shawkey and the Yankees to a 4-1 win.

Not long afterwards, Yankee Stadium came to be known as "The House That Ruth Built," a catch-phrase originating with sports writer Fred Lieb. Shawkey was a good friend of Ruth's when they were teammates and that didn't pose any problem when he later became his manager.

"He was just a big kid," says Shawkey. "He never had trouble with anyone. He never hurt anyone."

Ruth began his career in Boston and spent better than five years with the Red Sox, but to him, Yankee Stadium always was home.

There is something about the place which produces a sense of awe the first time you come upon it sitting there so quietly, so majestically, in the southwest section of the Bronx. To New York visitors, Yankee Stadium has become almost as much a landmark as the Statue of Liberty, the Empire State Building or Times Square.

Mickey Mantle still dreams about Yankee Stadium sometimes.

He says one of his greatest thrills was simply walking inside it for the first time in 1951. He had never seen a ballpark with three decks before.

I remember one of the first times my father took me to Yankee Stadium in 1932. I was 10 years old, the Yankees were playing Cleveland and I sat in the left field bleachers right next to the Indians' bullpen.

The Yanks scored a lot of runs that afternoon. They generally did in those days and the Cleveland bullpen was kept pretty busy. Willis Hudlin, Clint Brown and Sarge Connally warmed up repeatedly.

At one point, someone in the bleachers tossed a rubber ball into the Cleveland bullpen. Sarge Connally picked it up and handed it to me through the fence.

I must've kept that beat-up old rubber ball five years.

Reds Bursting Bubbles

By UPI

For the first six innings Tuesday night, it looked as though the Atlanta Braves were going to do what no other team has done so far this year—beat Cincinnati—and by a shutout yet. But the Reds burst that bubble as they have so many others.

Dave Concepcion, a shortstop not known for his power, tied the game with a solo homer in the seventh. The dam burst in the eighth as the visiting Reds turned five hits into five runs to rout the Braves 6-1.

Reds Manager Sparky Anderson was taking nothing for granted.

"I know we're good but when you're trailing, you worry about it until you get ahead," he said.

Getting ahead has hardly been a problem for the Reds this season as the defending World Champions have scored 39 runs in winning their first four games. The team is batting .355, despite All-Star catcher Johnny Bench's .118 average.

"We're better than last year," Anderson said. "Some of our young guys, like Foster and Griffey, had good seasons last year and it gave them a lot of confidence."

Anderson, who oozes confidence himself, assessed the Reds' prospects.

"I'm not saying we're going to win this thing this year but if somebody is going to beat us, they're going to have to have a good ballclub."

One measure of a first-rate club is whether the other players pick up the slack when a teammate falters. Tuesday night, the Reds' big guns of Bench, Joe Morgan and Tony Perez all went hitless. No matter. Concepcion poked his first homer, Bob Bailey delivered a pinch-hit RBI single. Griffey singled in two runs and Cesar Geronimo and Pete Rose each stroked RBI singles.

Speaking of his players, Anderson said: "If they were all to hit at the same time, it would be a sight to behold." A sight other teams would rather not see.

In other games, Pittsburgh drubbed St. Louis 14-4, Chicago edged the New York Mets 5-4, Houston clipped San Francisco 3-1 and San Diego downed Los Angeles 8-5.

In the American League, New York trounced Baltimore 7-1, Boston beat Cleveland 7-4, Milwaukee nipped Detroit 1-0, Chicago trimmed Minnesota 4-1, Texas downed Oakland 3-1 and Kansas City dumped California 7-4.

Pirates 14, Cardinals 4

Dave Parker drove in five runs with a home run, a single and a sacrifice fly to back up Jerry Reuss' six-hit pitching in powering Pittsburgh past St. Louis. Every Pirate scored at least one run and all but two had hits as they earned their third straight victory. Pittsburgh, the defending NL East champion, exploded for five runs in both the second and fifth innings.

Cubs 5, Mets 4

Manny Trillo tripled with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning and scored the winning run on Rick Monday's single to short center field to lift the Cubs over the Mets before a record opening day crowd of 44,818 in Chicago.

Astros 2, Giants 1

Consecutive run-scoring singles by light-hitting Skip Jutze and Roger Metzger gave Houston its victory over San Francisco, which wasted six hits and left 10 runners stranded during the first five innings.

Padres 8, Dodgers 5

Dave Winfield drilled a grand slam homer off reliever Stan Wall to cap a seven-run San Diego outburst in the seventh inning that carried the Padres over Los Angeles before a crowd of 52,703—the largest opening day turnout in the Dodgers' 15-year Los Angeles tenure. The Padres' victory snapped Burt Hooton's 12-game winning streak and handed the Dodgers their third loss without a win this season.

Bullets Had Last Laugh

Everything was against the Washington Bullets Tuesday night except the final score.

A record NBA playoff crowd of 19,974 jammed the Coliseum in the first NBA playoff game ever in northeast Ohio only to watch the Bullets jump out to a quick lead and hang on for a 100-95 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Bullets now hold a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven playoff series going into Thursday's game at Landover, Md.

The Bullets hit a sizzling 16-of-24 from the field and canned eight straight shots after Dave Bing missed the first shot of the game to lead 37-19 at the end of the first period.

"I'm glad we got off to a fast start," said Washington Coach K.C. Jones. "The ball was going in for us. The victory is not only big because we won here. It's big whenever you take that first game."

Elvin Hayes, with 13 first period points and a game high 28, led the Bullets' charge. Bing added 24 points.

"We felt it was our time to win one here. We felt we had to go out and play twice as hard," said Hayes, who also hauled down 18 of the Bullets' 51 rebounds. "The Cavs are a great offensive and defensive team. They will be tough and we have to stay tough."

Cleveland trailed 78-60 going into the final 12 minutes but reeled off nine unanswered points and held the Bullets without a basket in the first four minutes of the last quarter. The Cavs cut the lead to nine points twice after trailing by as much as 23 and got within eight points at 95-87 with 1:56 left.

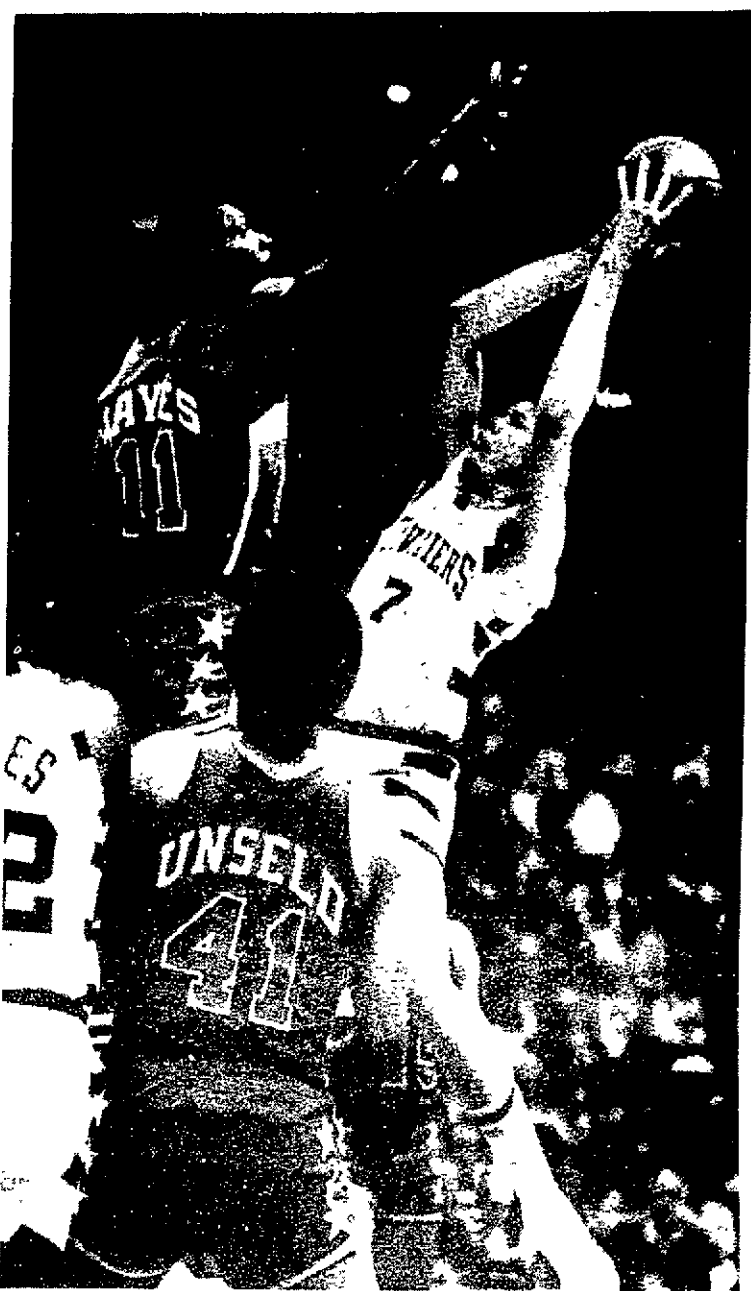

Hayes scored 24 seconds later but Jimmy Clemons and Jim Chones countered with baskets to cut the Washington lead to 97-91 with 43 seconds left. Bing stole the ball from Clemons and Hayes put the game out of reach on a free throw with 27 seconds left.

"We have never been in a playoff game before," said Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch. "We got off to a real bad start and we had a run at them, but they are tough. What we did in the second half tonight we may not be able to do in Washington."

In other NBA playoff action, Milwaukee stopped Detroit 110-107 and Seattle defeated Phoenix 102-99. There were no ABA playoff games.

Bucks 110, Pistons 107

Hayes Blocks Smith's Shot

their best-of-three series. Dave Meyers hit three free throws to tie the score 81-81 in the opening minutes of the final period and the Bucks went on to open up their largest lead 100-92 with 3:10 left.

Sonics 102, Suns 99

Sixth man Fred Brown scored 20 of his

Same Old Veeck Magic

By UPI

Bill Veeck is out to prove that Baseball 1976 is no different from baseball of any other year —and so far the maverick owner of the Chicago White Sox is having the last laugh on his American League peers.

Upon purchasing the White Sox this past winter, Veeck drew his share of guffaws for hiring 67-year old Paul Richards as his field manager. And the laughter didn't die down much when Veeck began installing grass at Comiskey Park while everyone else was raving about the merits of artificial turf.

Finally, in an age which has seen the Cincinnati Reds and Oakland A's put together championship teams with the emphasis on relief pitching, Veeck and Richards have taken their relievers out of the bullpen and transformed them into starters.

But for those folks who claim baseball is a changing game, the first returns of Veeck's "throwback" innovations are ominous.

Witness Rich Gossage, last season's top reliever in the American League with 26 saves, nine victories and a 1.84 earned run average, who made his first appearance of 1976 Tuesday—as a starter—and went the distance in beating the Minnesota Twins 4-1 on three hits.

"I didn't really think I could hold on but I got my second wind in the seventh inning," said Gossage, who struck out eight and retired 14 straight in the late innings. "Once I got that second wind, I knew I could finish up. Those 1-2-3 innings helped a lot."

Richards, meanwhile, was elated about his decision to move Gossage into his starting rotation.

"I'm not at all surprised at the way Rich pitched," he said. "I don't know why they made a relief pitcher out of him last year. The way he pitches he can do his own relieving."

The White Sox put the game away for Gossage in the eighth inning when with the score tied 1-1, Jorge Orta singled home Chet Lemon and then went to third when the ball bounced off right fielder Dan Ford. Orta scored on Carlos May's single and Jim Spencer doubled in May to make it 4-1.

Elsewhere in the American League Tuesday, the New York Yankees downed the Baltimore Orioles 7-1, Boston bested Cleveland 7-4 and Milwaukee whitewashed Detroit 1-0, Kansas City stopped California 7-4 and Texas topped Oakland 3-1.

In the National League, Pittsburgh routed St. Louis 14-4, Chicago edged the New York Mets 5-4, Cincinnati whipped Atlanta 6-1, Houston shaded San Francisco 2-1 and San Diego beat Los Angeles 8-5.

Red Sox 7, Indians 4

Fred Lynn, the AL's Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year in 1975, singled home Denny Doyle with the tie-breaking run in the fifth inning and Reggie Cleveland hurled 5 1-3 innings of two-hit relief as Boston beat Cleveland in its home opener. Carlton Fisk hit a

Quarry Asks Mike to Quit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Retired heavy-weight Jerry Quarry and his younger brother, Mike, who still has light-heavy-weight title aspirations, are at odds.

They're still close but Jerry wants Mike to quit boxing and Mike is determined to stay in the sport until he gets a second crack at a world championship.

"We've had a lot of discussions on the subject," said Mike, "and I suppose we'll have a lot more. He wants me to get out and I understand his feelings because I know all the disappointments and frustrations he had during his career."

"But I think I can still win the title and I want one more shot at it before I'm through. It's not the money or the prestige that comes with a championship. It's a goal within myself."

"I still strongly believe in myself as a fighter and I believe I can fight at any level. Now all I need is the opportunity to find out."

Now 25 and still with boyishly handsome good looks, Mike is no longer ranked among the top 10 light heavyweights in the world. But he's got his eye on either Victor Galindez of Argentina, the World Boxing Association 175-pound king, or England's John Conteh, the World Boxing Council champion.

In his last start Oct. 25, Quarry fought on the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier card at Madison Square Garden in New York and scored a 10-round decision over Mike Rossman.

"I'm just getting back in shape," he explained. "I know it's been awhile since

I fought but there have been reasons. Now I don't want to get back in the ring until I'm in top shape."

Quarry, who was 35-0 before being knocked out in four rounds by Bob Foster in June, 1973, at Las Vegas, Nev., has just moved back permanently to Southern California from Orlando, Fla. He has a 53-7-3 record but four of his defeats came three years ago when he was hampered by a viral infection.

Then there's the matter of a bad marriage. He was married three years and the couple, which has no children, has been separated for three months. His wife is living in Massachusetts and he has sold their home at San Luis Obispo, Calif., and has moved to Westminster, Calif.

Although he has returned to Los Angeles, his manager still is Pete Ashlock of Orlando.

"Pete was the reason I went to Florida to fight in the first place," the personable Quarry said. "Then for three years I commuted back and forth to my home in San Luis Obispo. Talk about being king of the road. Boy, I was that and then some."

"Looking back now, it was a big mistake. I'd go to the gym in Florida and everybody stood around watching me. I was really something there. I was a world-rated fighter. In Los Angeles, I'm just one of the guys. When I go to the gym here, it's a battle to survive. There's plenty of competition and that's what a fighter thrives on."

In SBA Tournament

Spada and Minkler Lead SBA Doubles with 1341

SAUGERTIES—John Spada and Don Minkler fired 1239 net and 1341 gross doubles in the 28th annual Saugerties Bowling Association tournament. But under the SBA rules, they were entitled to only one prize and selected high gross honors.

The prize for net doubles went to Fred Schreiner (536) and Otto Scheu (638) with 1174.

Spada contributed 576 net and 633 gross while Minkler was racking up 225, 246-663 net and 708 gross for the first place doubles, as they ground out a one-pin edge over Paul Legg (696 gross) and Jeff Young (644) who had 1340.

Bob Houtman (659) and Bill Brown (647) placed third with 1306 Robert Madsen (637) and Greg Foster (667) were fourth on 1304 and John Clark (644) and Joe Filicetto (657) fifth with 1301.

Paul Legg captured the singles championship with gross

696, with 526 in the wood and 170 handicap. Sam Shapiro was runnerup with 669 and Jeff Zindell third with 668. Others in the money were Bill McCormick 661, Wes Sparling 660, Joe Hinchey 655, Mitze Arlensky 650 and Jim Graham 640.

Rich Rosendale won the scratch singles with 581 off 180, 193 and 208.

Don Minkler won the net all-events championship with a 1788 aggregate on 613 in the team event, 628 doubles and 547 singles.

Paul Legg emerged as the handicap all-events champion with 2020 gross. Terry Carlisle was runnerup with 1949. Bill McCormick had 1945, Otto Scheu 1924 and Walt Pawlus 1900.

McCormick, with an entered average of 137, earned an American Bowling Congress Century Award with a 213 solo, 106 pins over his average

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — It doesn't rain often in Albuquerque but sometimes it pours — and Lionel Ortega runs anyway.

Like many American long distance runners, Ortega wants to be one of the three marathoners who will represent the United States in the summer Olympic Games at Montreal.

So the 21-year-old University of New Mexico track and cross-country star runs — 25 to 29 miles a day, seven days a week — come rain or shine.

The former Albuquerque prep athlete is one of a few Olympic hopefuls in New Mexico with a realistic chance of making the U.S. track and field team, according to experts such as state AAU official Ray Weakley.

Others include fellow distance runners Rick Rojas, Tony Sandoval and world class women's star Lynn Bjorklund, all of Los Alamos, and UNM steeplechaser Jay Miller, of Albuquerque.

Rojas, 24, a former Harvard standout who ran the marathon for the U.S. team in the Pan American Games at Mexico City last winter, is the best known.

But it is Ortega who has traveled farthest toward the goal of making the Olympics, being the only one so far to qualify for the trials. He earned the chance by running the 26-miles-plus event in less than two hours and 20 minutes last December in the National AAU championships at Culver City, Calif.

"To get your way paid to the trials in May at Eugene, Ore., you have to run a 2:20 or better," said Ortega, who was third at Culver City. "But you can still go with a time of 2:22. Five (at Culver City) got their way paid and nine were under the qualifying time."

Ortega said he was unaware of his exact time because he was told both 2:18.19 and 2:19.16 by different meet officials. What counted, he said, was both of those clockings were good for a free ticket to Eugene.

Actually, Ortega paid his way in his own fashion.

Last fall, as parents drove their children to school in a downpour in southeast Albuquerque, Ortega was the solitary figure they saw doing countless half-mile laps around a park in the rain.

Rojas has been hampered by influenza. He hasn't competed since the Jan. 31 Albuquerque Jaycees Invitational when he finished the two-mile in a near dead heat for second place with Frank Shorter, a former New Mexican who won the Olympic marathon gold medal at Munich in 1972.

Preferring the shorter distances anyway, Rojas said he decided to concentrate on his good speed and try for the 10,000 meters — about six miles — and the 5,000 meter.

"I was invited to a road race — the 'Marathon San Blas' — Feb. 8 in Puerto Rico but when I got there I ended up spending five days in bed," Rojas said. "They paid my way down there and I got the flu. Never did compete. At least I was able to practice my Spanish."

Rojas said the flu threw his training off schedule. He could no longer put in the kind of mileage required for the marathon — he currently runs 80 miles a week, half as far as Ortega.

Miss Bjorklund, 18, a freshman at UNM, is the American record-holder at 3,000 meters with a time of 9:08. She won the AAU women's national cross country championship the past two years.

However, Lynn's Olympic fate is still uncertain. She is hampered by a back injury and normally does better at longer distances than the 1,500 meters, which is the limit in women's Olympic competition.

Sandoval, a distance star at Stanford University, was a member of the American team in international cross country competition. His friend and neighbor, Rojas, said Sandoval also plans to try for the 5,000 and 10,000 meters and should have as good a chance as most to be successful in the trials. Miller, 21, wants to run the 3,000 meter steeplechase. He has set a goal of cutting 12 seconds during meets in the next two months to qualify for the Olympic trials.

Then, there are the foreign athletes who run for college teams in New Mexico — such as Bike Bort of Kenya and Eastern New Mexico University. Bort represented his country in the 1972 Olympics, winning a bronze medal in the 800 meters and placing fourth in the 1,500 meters.

He hasn't slacked off since, posting the best 800 meter time anywhere in the world last year and being named the 1975 Collegiate Runner of the Year by "Track and Field News."

Boit led ENMU to a meet record in the college distance medley relay early this month at the Texas Relays.

Finn, Devine Schools Volleyball Champions

KINGSTON — More than 200 fifth and sixth grade girls of the 14 Kingston Elementary Schools took part in the 6th annual Round Robin Volleyball Tournament at the Chambers School. Sophie Finn School captured its fourth A Division title with a sparkling 11-1 record, losing only to Brigham School. Meagher placed second with a 10-2 record, its two losses being administered by the Finn team.

In the B Division, Anna Devine and Hurley would up in dead heat for first place with 11-1 records. A playoff ensued and Devine won the best-of-three playoff in straight sets, 15-9, 15-9.

More than 200 fifth and sixth grade girls of the 14 Kingston Elementary Schools took part in the 6th annual Round Robin Volleyball Tournament under the direction of Joseph G. Delino, Elementary Supervisor of Physical Education.

New Coach at Hartwick

ONEONTA — Hartwick College, one of the nation's leading soccer powers, today announced the appointment of James W. Lennox of Mitchell Junior College in New London, Conn., as the new soccer head coach. Lennox replaces Timo Liekoski, who recently joined the pro ranks as an assistant coach for the Dallas Tornado.

Lennox, who was named 1975 Junior College Coach of the Year, has a career record of 77 wins, 21 losses and 5 ties.

Mitchell Junior College ranked third in the national junior college standings in 1975 with a 15-1 record.

The three of the Mitchell teams coached by Lennox had undefeated seasons and were ranked in the NJCAA Soccer Rating Board among the top ten in the country.

On Opening Day

Present at the opening day ceremonies at Rondout Pool Golf and Tennis Association were (L-R) Richie Aaron, club pro; Dick Despres, club president, and Rich Quick, assistant pro. More than 100 persons turned out for the Opening Day, 1976 ceremonies. Helen B. Brown of Kerhonkson won the free membership drawing which entitles her to a free, full-family membership for 1976. Bob Kuster and Bob Sgroi conducted a closest-to-the-pin contest. The winners were Joan Kuster, Beth Aaron and Angie Wilson among the women and Roger Anderson, Dick Despres and Bob Sgroi among the men. The next scheduled event of the golf calendar is a 9-hole Scotch Foursome on Sunday, April 25.

Money Pinch Irks Olympians

SYDNEY (UPI) — Australia may be one of the top athletic nations of the world but its athletes feel their country has let them down badly.

"Being an amateur athlete in Australia is like being down in the gutter," says Dennis Green, a canoeist, and the country's longest serving Olympian. "Encouragement just doesn't exist in Australia."

"Australia really doesn't deserve to have the great champions we have produced," says Forbes Carlisle, one of Australia's leading swimming coaches.

The athletes are airing their views as the Australian Olympic team, preparing for the Montreal Games, continues to meet one hurdle after another in its way.

Among their complaints: primitive training methods, pitiful government support and woeful lack of money to finance the team's trip to Montreal.

Not long ago, medal winners roamed the cricket and soccer ovals throughout the country carrying blankets and appealing to sports fans to "toss in a few coins" to help get the Australian teams to the Games.

Ace athletes like Dawn Fraser, Murray Rose, Jon Hendricks and Lorraine Craps helped put Australia on the Olympic map during the 1956 Melbourne Games with 13 golds, 22 silver and bronzes to finish third behind the sporting giants, the United States and Soviet Union. But it has been downhill for Australia ever since.

In 1960 at Rome: eight golds. In 1964 at Tokyo: six golds. Then, thanks to swimming wonder Shane Gould and two unexpected yachting victories, the tally moved back to eight at Munich in 1972. The rot, however, has not stemmed. Some coaches and athletes simply are giving up.

Don Talbot, one of the world's top swimming coaches, left Australia for Canada and has vowed never to return. His complaint, according to the Sydney Daily Mirror, is, "Under Australian conditions, coaches are granted status no better than pool attendants."

Under Talbot's coaching, Canada is threatening to edge Australia among the world's swimming powers.

Australian swimming team captain Graham Windeatt, who won a bronze at Munich, was forced to sell his sports car to raise $7,000 in fees for tuition under Talbot in Canada. Stephen Badger, 200-meter freestyle winner in the Commonwealth Games, has offered to swim for Canada at Montreal.

Olympic diver Kevin Grove gave up his Australian citizenship and returned with his wife to his native Austria where he was immediately given a scholarship at the Vienna Sports College.

That prompted Dawn Fraser, a former star and perhaps the greatest woman swimmer of all time, to say Australia should follow the United States in providing educational scholarship grants to athletes.

"We are such a backward country in sports," she said.

It will cost approximately $1 million to send a contingent of 250 Australian athletes and officials to the Summer Olympics. The Australian government is providing only $320,000. The remainder is being sought from commercial and industrial companies—and the public.

Quinn Wins

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Young Quinn, apparently boxed in with less than a quarter of a mile to go, suddenly found an opening and charged to his second straight $50,000 Provincial Cup win Sunday at Windsor Raceway.

The New Zealand-bred, 7-year-old gelding, handled by driver Joe Marsh Jr., was clocked at 1:58.6 and finished a length ahead of Leader's Dream and Fly Fly Solly. Young Quinn tied the track record of 1:58.6 in the 1975 Provincial Cup race, but a chilly 31 degree temperature reading and gusty winds prevented him from equalling that mark.

Look at the Peace Corps, Past and Present

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Peace Corps is 15 years old and the celebrated government agency, born in the Kennedy era, has changed with the times.

For one thing, it's smaller and less visible. "When I tell people I work for the Peace Corps, their usual response is, 'I didn't realize it was still in existence,'" says Charles "Woody" Jewett, an agency placement officer and former volunteer in Ethiopia.

Jewett, now 32 and married, joined the Peace Corps one week after his graduation with a bachelor's degree in English from Hobart College at Geneva, N.Y., in 1966.

"I had always been fascinated by Africa, game parks, animals," he said.

He spent three months at UCLA training for a teaching position in Ethiopia with 100 other volunteers his age.

"I was caught up in a very idealistic time," he said. "Everyone was excited as hell by the idea of going over and being a teacher."

Volunteerism was at its peak. The Peace Corps had 15,556 volunteers in 48 countries, 912 of them in Ethiopia. Students were flocking to campus recruiting booths, lured by the promise of overseas travel, enriching experiences and — until 1970 — Vietnam draft deferments.

"Our attitude was 'come, we'll find something for you,'" one official remembered.

President Lyndon B. Johnson and Vice President Hubert Humphrey were two of the agency's biggest supporters. Its $114 million budget was a record high.

Once overseas, says Raphael "Skip" Semms, "the treatment they often received was just tremendous. They were viewed on par with an ambassador."

Semms also volunteered 10 years ago. Today, at age 33, he is director of the Independent Foundation, a private, nonprofit organization of former Peace Corps and VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) volunteers.

At the Ethiopian airport, Jewett was assigned to a junior high school in a small town. "There was the feeling that one person working within the Peace Corps could do something great," he said. "As it turned out, it was a very naive, unrealistic feeling. There was such a limited number of people you had any superficial contact with." Today there are 6,890 volunteers — fewer than half the number a decade ago — spread over 68 countries, 20 more than in 1966. Only 33 volunteers now work in Ethiopia. Anti-Americanism and strong nationalistic sentiment there, as in other politically turbulent developing countries, has contributed to the decline in volunteer ranks. The Peace Corps has been asked to leave eight countries since Jewett and Semms joined 10 years ago, although some countries invited the volunteers to return when a new government took over.

Illiteracy Said No Bar to High School Diplomas

By UPI
Charles G. Clark, Hawaii's new school superintendent, contends students who cannot read should be awarded high school diplomas anyway.

Clark says a diploma should be based on attendance and not on academic achievement. He says some students "will never learn to read in spite of everything that has been done for them" and they should not be "punished" for their failures.

Results of college entrance examinations indicate today's high school grads are less prepared in reading and writing skills than ever before. Despite all the hoopla about improved reading programs, test scores keep dropping.

"There aren't any real standards for getting out of high school anymore," said Jerry Hitt, admissions director at Georgia Tech University.

"Generally speaking," said William Smith, linguistics professor at Boston College, "kids are going through high school and many can't read or write. Students are kept in school and not flunked out because society doesn't want young kids out on the streets. They are willing to wait until a student is 18 before he's out on the street. The reasoning behind this is economic and social."

"But an interesting problem has arisen in education during the past couple of years. Kids are asking for example 'Why should we learn to write?' There is no need to write. No one writes anymore. And in a way, they have a point. Very few people write or need to write," Smith said.

"They also say there is no need to read and again they have a point. A fellow in a General Motors assembly line doesn't need to read. He gets the news on television or radio. He does very little reading. Society has changed and so have the attitudes of students toward education."

Eight major Chicago corporations are spending a combined total of $10 million a year to teach beginning employees the basic skills of reading, writing, typing, speaking, grooming, shorthand and arithmetic.

The trend has triggered a raging debate among educators. Should diplomas be given to students who lack basic skills in reading, writing and arithmetic? Or should stringent measures be taken to require more from students in the future?

Some state and local education officials are not waiting around for the debate to be settled.

Albert A. Briggs, an elementary school superintendent in Chicago, declared that beginning this June, eighth graders in 19 elementary schools will be required to read at a sixth grade level to move on to high school.

Of 296 eighth graders currently headed for high school in the district, only 26 can read at a seventh grade level, he said.

The Philadelphia school district has set up an old-fashioned elementary school that demands daily homework, strict discipline and emphasizes the three R's. Students will be required to meet minimum requirements before advancing to the next grade.

New York state's commissioner of education, Ewald B. Nyquist, says he will very soon propose a regulation that would make an eighth or ninth-grade reading level mandatory for a high school diploma.

Nevada's state education board took the unique step of ordering a feasibility study on a two diploma system for high schools. Diplomas would be issued after seniors pass a competency test while students who fail the test would get a certificate indicating they attended a high school.

Can Air Replace Freon?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Can ordinary air be used both as a refrigerant to replace fluorocarbons such as Freon in refrigeration and air conditioning and as a source of energy for home heating?

A Maryland Fla. engineering firm, Rovac Corp., believes it can. The firm, headed by Dr. Tom Edwards, has built a mobile air conditioning system using air as the refrigerant and currently has experimental and development contracts for them with General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. The U.S. Army and Air Force and with Fiat in Italy. An article in the trade magazine Air Conditioning & Refrigerating Business discussed Edwards' hope of reversing his air cycle in a heat pump to heat homes. Edwards told United Press International his aim in this direction is to develop a small, highly efficient unit that will extract heat from the air on cool, cloudy days to provide all the supplementary heat in a solar heated home.

So many people moved out of Fort Worth, Tex., during the "Panic of 1873" that a young lawyer wrote a newspaper saying the city was so dead he had seen a panther lying asleep and unmolested in the main street. This caused the fire department to adopt a panther cub as its mascot.

McCartney

climbs to the stratosphere like that it becomes a scandal rather than an offer. He feels the money simply tarnishes the idea of a reunion and makes it much too commercial. McCartney believes that if the quartet were ever to reassemble again it will for a really good cause or for some appealing musical reason but not just for money. Has anybody thought to mention the Bicentennial?

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Why is publisher and TV talk show host William Buckley Jr. smiling? Perhaps because his recent novel, "Saving the Queen," which he dashed off in his spare time for the fun of it, has been topping "1876" for several weeks on the best-seller lists. The latter book, of course, was authored by the very literary Gore Vidal, a long time foe of Mr.

Shirley MacLaine's idea to do a movie about aviatrix Amelia Earhart? I remember her boy friend, Pete Hamill the writer, was collaborating with Shirley on the script. - G.E., Saint Louis, Mo.

A: Shirley's pressing on with this project and has raised about five million dollars for the film which will get started this summer. Only trouble is she may get scooped by a TV version of the Earhart story planned for this fall.

Q: Is it true that your mood can be influenced by the ionization of the air around you? - J.G., Burlington, Vt.

A: Scientists have been telling us for a long time that an abundance of negative ions in the air is refreshing and can lift the spirits. This is the kind of feeling you sense after a thunderstorm.

Positive ions, on the other

Nootropyl show promising results on both laboratory animals and human subjects. Though testing has been limited, people given the drug have exhibited a definite increase in memory and problem-solving capabilities.

Q: Is Diane von Furstenberg expected to marry film executive, Barry Diller? - G.A., Elko, Nev.

A: Diane, now running her own multi-million dollar dress designing business, is doing so well on her own she may prefer to remain independent. So don't hold your breath waiting for a wedding. And furthermore, we understand that her estranged husband, Prince Egon, met Diller on a plane to Los Angeles and the two have become friends. Somehow that doesn't seem to ad-

Prepare for Terror in Capital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Park Police are training with make-believe scenes of stark terror—a Washington Monument sniper, a Lincoln Memorial bomb scare—to prepare for threatened radical attacks in the nation's capital July 4.

Inspector Hugh Groves told UPI that putting his 23 shift commanders "in the pressure cooker" with the realistic taperecorded scripts is designed to find out who can stand the strain and how each will react as emergencies develop.

There are three scripts. Each deals with an incident on the wide, grassy mall that links the Lincoln Memorial with the Capitol—where police believe radicals may strike if they carry out a Weather Underground threat to "bring the fireworks" to Washington for the July 4 bicentennial celebration.

The Mall, 2½ miles long and lined with roads, is under Park Police jurisdiction. Among their worries is word that radicals intend to make "a roman candle" out of the 555-foot Washington Monument, which stands on the Mall.

"There is a sniper bound for the window at the top on the east side," a Park Police radio dispatcher's voice reports in one Washington Monument script.

The shift commander thinks fast: First, clear the vast lawn surrounding the huge Washington Monument and thronged with tourists at 2 p.m. on a warm day. Seated at a desk instead of in his command car, talking into a dummy microphone, he issues orders.

The dispatcher interrupts. "A man at 15th and Madison has been hit," comes the new report. Then, a moment later: "An officer near the monument has been hit by gunfire."

The sniper "controls" an area extending nearly 1,000 yards in all directions, scoring hits on motorists and pedestrians on even distant streets by spraying them with bullets from his automatic rifle.

In the end a Park Police Special Equipment and Tactics Teams arrives in an armored truck, climbs the monument's stairs and captures the sniper. The commander faced with the hypothetical situation is under real pressure because he also knows Parks Police officials are listening. Later they will question every decision he makes.

The scripts, drafted by Capt. Jack M. Sands, were made available to UPI. They include a bomb threat at the Lincoln Memorial, a sniper firing from the monument vantage point and the imprisonment of 90 hostages in the top gallery of the monument. Each script last 15 minutes if played without interruption. But Sands can make them go on for hours by spacing the dispatcher reports to match realistic conditions. The hostage incident hypothetically lasts 10 hours and ends with a negotiated surrender. FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley said in congressional testimony two months ago terrorists might hit Washington during the nation's 200th birthday celebration. He cited a Weather Underground threat: "The rulers have set the time for the party; let us bring the fireworks."

Floating N-Plant Favored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff has decided there are no major environmental reasons to block construction of the world's first floating atomic power plant in the Atlantic Ocean off the New Jersey coast, an NRC spokesman said recently.

The staff's draft environmental impact statement appeared certain to draw heavy criticism. It must be submitted for comment to federal, state and local officials and is subject to revision before a final statement is issued.

The book-length draft statement was based on a two-year study of pioneering plans by the Public Service Electric and Gas Co. of Newark to put a floating nuclear power plant 2.8 miles out in the Atlantic just north of Atlantic City.

It said the risk of a lethal release of radioactivity through the air or water was "very low" and concluded there was little likelihood the tourist economy of the New Jersey shore would be damaged by the presence of the plant.

"The staff concludes that from an environmental impact point of view the plant should be constructed," the spokesman said.

In December, the NRC Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards issued a report tentatively approving the grant of a license to Offshore Power Systems, a Westinghouse subsidiary, to manufacture up to eight floating atomic power plants at Jacksonville, Fla.

The draft statement said experience in New York and Arkansas has shown there should be little or no dent in tourism caused by fear about the plant. It said the installation would greatly reduce East Coast reliance on foreign oil.

Breakwater and transmission line dredging will stir up 127 acres of sea floor, the statement said, creating potentially heavy siltation. It said burying the transmission lines will scar 43 acres of marsh and forest land, although much digging can be done in an existing road rather than in surrounding wetlands.

The NRC spokesman said the draft environmental statement was only "one small step" in the process of getting approval for the floating power plant, as was the reactor safeguards committee's preliminary report.

"We're a long way from approval," he said.

The $2 billion New Jersey plant, with two reactors in separate buildings, would be moored in 60 feet of water and protected with a breakwater to guard against ship collisions, high waves and winds.

Electrical transmission lines running from the plant to the shore would be placed in a large pipe on the ocean floor. To protect wetlands along the coast, the lines would be carried in an underground pipe approximately seven miles from the shoreline to a switching station.

Queen Opens Exhibit Of War

GREENWICH, England (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth is paying a good loser's tribute to the rebels who defeated her country in the American colonies 200 years ago.

The queen, with her husband, Prince Philip, was sailing downriver today in a borrowed launch to officially open a vast and colorful exhibition called "1776" — Britain's major contribution to the American Bicentennial celebrations. "1776" is a panorama of the War of Independence with exhibitions lent by some 165 museums, collections and individuals. About half of the lenders are American.

"The idea that the British should want to take a look at this celebration provoked both amusement and envy," said

Kenneth Pearson, the exhibition organizer.

"We had come from London — the enemy. Americans found it quaint, amusing, droll, puzzling, eccentric — and they lent."

But the lenders' list is headed by Queen Elizabeth herself, releasing from the royal treasury many items personally associated with her ancestor, George III, who had the misfortune to be king when the Americans cut loose.

Pearson said he and his aides travelled "13,000 miles by car in the United States, Canada, France and Great Britain snapping up clues in countless museums, libraries and historical societies."

He came up with 595 items — a harvest including priceless one-of-a-kind historic documents and the most common and homespun items of the day.

Two Thirds of a Loaf Ends Strike

BEACON, N.Y. (UPI) — Inmates at the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminally Insane Tuesday voted to end an 11-day strike after learning two of their three major demands would be met.

According to authorities, the approximately 200 inmates who joined in the strike reached their decision after Superintendent Vito Ternullo told them Monday that three more psychiatrists would be hired, as they had demanded. Ternullo reportedly also assured the prisoners the facility would look into revamping its parole system. Prisoners had complained that only 12 Matteawan inmates had received parole in the past several years.

The superintendent did not address the inmate's third issue — a lack of recreational and vocational programs, authorities said.

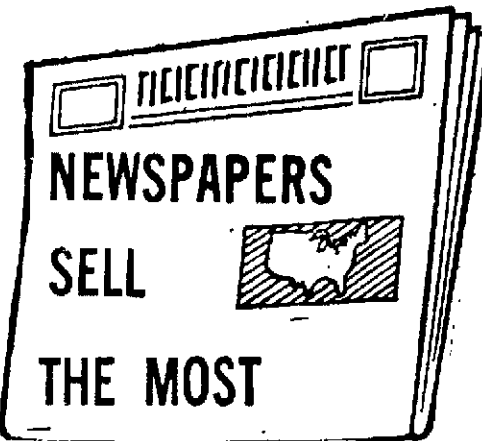

The strike began April 2, with some two-thirds of the prison's 300 inmates participating. Prisoners refused to leave the prison dayroom to go to meals or any scheduled activities.

Prison authorities said the inmates continued to refuse to leave the dayroom during the strike's duration — although they did receive some food there.

'Guilty' In Sale Of Cocaine

KINGSTON—The third of four men arrested in October 1974 after allegedly selling an estimated $100,000 worth of cocaine to undercover state police investigators at a Kingston-area motel pleaded guilty in Ulster County Court Monday to second degree criminal sale of a controlled substance.

Francis Piccoli, 28, of Kingston, represented by attorney Robert Ricken, pleaded guilty to the felony drug charge which carries a mandatory prison term with a minimum of six years to life.

Last week two others arrested in the case also entered guilty pleas. William Myrdycz, 20, of Hudson, pleaded guilty to second degree criminal sale of a controlled substance. Bruce Abu, 24, of Rosendale, pleaded guilty to third degree criminal sale of a controlled substance.

The fourth defendant, Ned Cecchini of North Miami, Fla., formerly of Poughkeepsie, is slated to stand trial at a later date.

Archeology Course Is Set at UCCC

STONE RIDGE—A credit-free course entitled "Archeology: Can You Dig It" will be offered at Ulster County Community College on 10 Saturday mornings beginning April 24.

Richard E. Gavitt of Cottekill, who teaches a basic course in archeology at the Overlook School in Saugerties, will teach the credit-free course at the Stone Ridge campus.

Techniques, theory and history of archeology will be covered in the course. Discussion will also involve the methodology of the dig, site and tool selection and handling and interpreting materials.

The registration deadline is April 16. Further information can be obtained by calling the Office of Continuing Education at UCCC.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF CHANGE IN ELECTRIC RATE SCHEDULE
On April 2, 1976 Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation filed with the Public Service Commission of the State of New York revisions to electric rate schedule, P.S.C. No. 14—Electricity, to become effective May 12, 1976. Said revisions propose a change in the factor of adjustment of the Fuel Cost Adjustment Clause. Based on a recomputation for the twelve months ending December 31, 1975, the factor of adjustment decreases from 1.1260 to 1.1189.

Senate Rejects Schwartz, 35-22

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The Senate, voting down a major gubernatorial appointment for the first time in memory, has rejected Gov. Hugh Carey's controversial nominee to head the state's prison watchdog agency.

The 35-22 vote Tuesday night against Herman Schwartz ran mostly along party lines in the Republican-dominated Senate.

The Democratic governor charged that those who voted against Schwartz as chairman of the Commission of Correction had shown a lack of commitment to prison reform.

Carey said the 44-year-old Buffalo law professor and attorney "has been made a scapegoat by those in our state whose commitment to prison reform goes no farther than rhetoric."

"Losing the services of Herman Schwartz will mean losing the services of a highly qualified individual, but it will not mean losing the fight to restore our jails and prisons to the proper condition," Carey said.

The governor said a search for a successor to Schwartz, "equally dedicated to the same high principles," would begin immediately.

Schwartz, named acting chairman last August, was attacked by the State Sheriffs Association and other law enforcement groups. He could not be reached for comment after the vote.

The lawmen were opposed to his hiring of several ex-inmates as prison inspectors and his proposal of new jail rules which they said were too liberal and expensive.

Schwartz defended the new rules as legally and morally necessary and said the ex-offenders were properly supervised and offered valuable insights to the commission.

Sources said Schwartz's confirmation ordeal had brought the commission's work to a near-standstill, with uncertainty over the outcome having paralyzed operations.

In a two-hour debate on the nomination, Sen. Ralph Marino of Syosset, the GOP chairman of the Senate Committee on Crime and Correction, charged that Schwartz was an "insensitive administrator" who did not seek input from the sheriffs. Marino was a driving force behind legislation last year which set up the strengthened, full-time commission.

"Herman Schwartz did it to himself," Marino said. "He was unbalanced in his thinking in favor of the inmates. He's a terrible administrator. He doesn't understand the job he's doing."

Sen. Emanuel Gold of Queens, the ranking Democrat on Marino's committee, criticized Marino for "really low character assassination" in some of his comments on Schwartz.

"If you want reform you have to do more than talk about it," Gold said. "For the first time in years, we've got a commission that's doing something."

Schwartz first gained wide notice outside the legal field as a member of the observers' committee which tried to negotiate a peaceful end to the 1971 Attica prison rebellion.

One of the two Republicans to vote for Schwartz was Sen. John Dunne of Garden City, who was also a member of the Attica panel. Sen. Roy Goodman of Manhattan was the other Republican.

Last month, Marino's committee deadlocked, 6-6, on the nomination. The Senate Finance Committee later voted to urge rejection by the full house.

Carey's other appointees to the three-member panel, Sullivan County Sheriff Joseph Wacker and Dorothy Wadsworth of Rochester, have faced little opposition and were expected to win easy Senate approval once the Schwartz controversy was settled.

Republicans against: Anderson, Auer, Barclay, Caemmerer, Calandra, Conklin, Donovan, Eckert, Flynn, Giuffreda, Gordon, Hudson, Johnson, Knorr, Levy, Lombardi, Marchi, Marino, McFarland, Padavan, Paterson, Pisani, Presenti, Rolison, Schermerhorn, B.C. Smith, W.T. Smith, Stafford, Trunzo, Volker and Warder.

Democrats against: Gazzara, Griffin, Isabella and Nolan.

Excused: Mason (R) and Tauriello (D).

KINGSTON—City police are seeking a black male who attacked a Fair Street woman with a knife Tuesday night outside her residence. The woman, who police declined to identify, ran screaming from her attacker to a neighbor's house. She sustained a minor cut as the man slashed at her with the knife.

City detectives said the woman told them she left her house at 149 Fair Street at about 10 p.m. and returned about 10 minutes later to sit on her porch for a short time. She left the porch to get her dog, police were told, when a man with a towel over his face started coming toward her.

Screaming, the woman ran past the man, at which time

he slashed at her, and fled to a neighbor's house, from which police were summoned. She sustained a slight cut in the chest, police said.

Checking the area, police found the knife and towel, but not the woman's assailant.

Detectives discovered that the woman's house had been broken into during the short time she was away from it. The burglar apparently heard the woman return and took a knife and towel from the house, which he used in the attack, police said. A small amount of cash was also reported taken.

A full description of the woman's attacker was not available. Investigation continued today.

Police Beat

the Juvenile Aid Bureau for processing.

Other Burglaries

Two burglaries sometime Monday night or early Tuesday are also under investigation by Kingston Police Department detectives.

A turntable and speakers valued at $363.83 were reported taken from the Thomas McDonald residence, 21 Park Street, sometime between 5:45 p.m. Monday and 12:15 a.m. Tuesday.

Extensive vandalism was reported at the Uniform Printing Supply warehouse at 132 Flatbush Avenue during a burglary sometime between 5 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. Several offices were ransacked at the warehouse, detectives said.

Senate Overrides Carey Ed Veto

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The Senate at 12:55 a.m. today voted overwhelmingly to override Gov. Hugh Carey's veto of a New York City education bill, handing the Democratic chief executive his second major setback in less than seven hours.

On Tuesday evening, the Senate had voted to reject Carey's nomination of Buffalo lawyer Herman Schwartz as chairman of the State Correction Commission, the first time in recent memory that a gubernatorial nominee had been turned down by the Senate.

The vote to override by 46 senators, six more than the minimum needed, marked the first time in 104 years that the legislature had passed a bill into law over a governor's veto.

Nine Democrats and two Republicans voted to sustain Carey's veto of the bill, which would prohibit the city of New York from making disproportionate cuts in its school system budget.

The effect of the new law would be to mandate restoration of $150 million trimmed from the city's school spending, although it appeared certain that the city would challenge the measure in court as a violation of "home rule" powers of the local governing body.

Senate Minority Leader Manfred Ohrenstein led the fight against the override. The Manhattan Democrat called the vote "a statement not against the governor, but a vote against the failure of leadership in the city of New York."

Thwart Burglary

At about 6 p.m. Tuesday city police captured a 15-year-old juvenile who had broken into an office building at 41 John Street.

Police received a report of the burglary in progress at the building containing law offices and offices for the New York City Board of Water Supply at 5:52 p.m.

Checking inside the building, they found the juvenile hiding. He was turned over to
